

NEED INDUCEMENT TO SELL STUMPAGE

Washington, Feb. 17.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—Inducements for investors in the sale of stumps for the supply of paper pulp mills in the Pacific Northwest along the liberal lines offered from the forest reserves in Alaska were advocated by Representative Albert Johnson of Washington during debate on the agricultural appropriation bill in the house.

"At a time when the forest service is undertaking to find bidders for great amounts of stumps in Alaska and to make leases for as long a time as 20 years," he said, "in the hope that we can make paper up there, it might make the same prices and offer the same inducements in the Pacific Northwest, because while we need the paper everywhere, I am inclined to believe that if we induce capital to go in, under any low price, to the forest reserve in Alaska, it will find the same difficulty that the papermakers in Oregon and Washington now find—that the freight rates are such as to prohibit the sale of paper in the markets of the East, and they will be that much more from Alaska."
