IMPORTANT NEWS OF PORTLAND'S CHURCHES

By Theonon W. Burgess
Feel no disgrace unless found out.

Chatterer Jeers at Happy Jack
Branch of another tree, Happy Jack after him. It was the start of a mad chase through the tree tops.

Happy Jack isn't this kind. All the time he was in Bobby Coon's house he felt ashamed of himself for allowing curiosity to lead him to do a thing he knew wasn't right.

Happy Jack found things just as Chatterer the Red Squirrel had said they were. As he expressed it, there was a "pile of Coons" in the bed at the bottom of that hollow.

Happy Jack's ears burned, as the saying is, when he thought it was his own door and got way inside before he found out his mistake.
