

EX-CROWN PRINCE TURNS TO ART AND TO BLACKSMITHING

By Clyde Beals
(Written for the United News)
Schanzen, Holland, Feb. 21.—Probably the ex-crown prince of Germany takes little stock in the old belief of the sins of the fathers being visited upon the son. At any rate his exile, monotonous though it may be, is very little like punishment to him. In a way he takes his isolation calmly, philosophically and with a touch of pride in the "honor" he is conferring upon the peasants of the little island of Wieringen.

Summed up, Frederick's attitude is that of a good little prince, playing fairly godfather to a few hundred poor villagers. Nearly every native on the island proudly holds something bearing the imperial coat of arms inscribed "Wilhelm" for Frederick signs himself in the style of his once august father.

LIVES IN DRAB HOUSE

The keeper of the one and only hotel, for example, has a leather cigar case. The blacksmith, who has given Frederick frequent instruction in making horseshoes at the village forge, wears a silver scarf pin with the same insignia.

The former heir to the throne lives, however, in a very unpretentious manner. His "palace" is a drab dwelling in a row of typically Dutch houses all patterned alike, in the village of Oosterland at the far end of the island. The prince has spent no money in fixing it up, or in building a monumental entrance to the "estate," as has his father at Deorn.

Instead, the only distinguishing feature of Frederick's dwelling is a new iron fence, about waist high, with arrowhead tops, and a bright sign.

The prince's household staff consists of five persons. They consist of the neat, rosy cheeked Dutch girl, who answers the doorbell, a peasant faced German chauffeur who sports the Wilhelmese waxed moustache; Major von Uhlner, Frederick's adjutant, who is typically Prussian and whose frowning stare threatens all who attempt to pry into the prince's affairs, and who looks as though his position carried with it all the weight of the world, and two scullery servants.

In addition to his blacksmithing the prince has lately turned his attention to art, and has already done several portraits of village notables. He is now engaged in the likeness of a little girl. The girl's father says, without flattery, that he can discern some resemblance between the portrait and his subject.

Twice each week the middleweight champion of Amsterdam arrives and swaps punches with Frederick. Sometimes they go as many as 10 rounds before the prince decides he has had enough.

Then, on bright afternoons, Frederick's limousine may be seen skirting the island. The prince usually picks up a crowd of village children and gives them an hour or two of pleasure in the big car.

Naturally, Frederick is somewhat popular and he is doing everything he can to conserve and add to that popularity.

Washington, Feb. 21.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—The Indian appropriation bill, as sent to conference from the senate, carries $110,000 for improvements at the Chemawa school in Oregon, in addition to the $147,400 allowed by the bill as it passed the house.

Hardings Will Go To McLean Home on Arrival in Capital

(By United News)
Washington, Feb. 21.—When President-elect and Mrs. Harding arrive in Washington on March 3, they are expected to accept the hospitality of the McLean home and go from there the next day to the White House, via the capitol, where the oath of office will be administered.

In this the Hardings will follow the example of President and Mrs. Taft, who were brought away from the time-honored custom of going to a hotel and went instead to the home of a close friend. Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean have offered one of their homes here to the Hardings.

On reaching Washington, March 3, 1913, President Wilson with his wife and daughter went direct to the Shoreham, where dinner was served in their apartment. Next day the women of the family went to the capitol from the hotel but did not return, going to the White House following the administration of the oath to President Wilson.

Theodore Roosevelt had taken the oath of office as president on the way to Buffalo, following the assassination of President McKinley, and, consequently, arrived in Washington as president of the United States, the first and only time this was ever done.

LEGION TO WATCH MEETINGS, SAYS CIRCULAR ISSUED

(By United News)
Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 21.—The American Legion will keep a close watch on a series of mass meetings planned for the near future in the principal cities of the East and the Middle West, ostensibly in protest against the presence of negro colonial troops in the French army of occupation on the Rhine, it was learned at national headquarters of the legion here Sunday night.

These meetings mark the revival of German propaganda efforts on a national scale in the United States in an effort to create sentiment in America unfriendly to the allies and clear the way to the creation in America of a powerful political machine which shall use its "invisible" influence to further German interests, according to a special bulletin sent from the national headquarters to all state headquarters.

Cities in which such mass meetings have been planned are New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Louisville, Omaha, Chicago and Cleveland, according to the legion bulletin, which says:

"There is come to the attention of national headquarters information indicating a move for a national movement of German propaganda activities in the United States which are the result of a carefully directed national campaign, the object of which seems to be:

"First, the disruption of the accord which exists between the United States and our allies; with particular reference to France and Great Britain, by the turning of American popular sentiment against the governments of these countries; and,

"Second, the methodical creation of a powerful political machine by the amalgamation of the disloyal elements of our population and their elevation to a place of power in American affairs by the invisible influence of this organized minority."

"One of the first national manifestations of this activity," the bulletin added, "will probably take the form of a series of mass meetings throughout the country, ostensibly to protest against the occupation of the Rhine by French negro troops from Africa. The alleged presence of black French colonialists is to be used as a motive to turn American sentiment against France."

left by Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil millionaire and Republican national committeeman whom she declares she mortally wounded by accident after the oil king, in drunken rage, had threatened physical violence.

According to friends of the girl, evidence will be presented at her trial to show that she was promised only formal prosecution with a verdict of acquittal if she relinquished this claim to the estate and that her refusal is the inspiring motive of the bitter fight being waged against her.

Reports also in circulation that powerful enemies of the girl are preparing to use political influence to disqualify "Buck" Garrett, sheriff of Carter county, from serving at her trial. According to friends of Garrett, who is one of the most popular officials in the county, if such a move is made, it will be because he has refused to lend aid to the conspiracy alleged to exist to convict the accused woman.

OKLAHOMA PEOPLE AWAIT SENSATION IN HAMON CASE

By Mildred Morris
Ardmore, Okla., Feb. 21.—(I. N. S.)—The town is waiting for sensations to pop in the Hamon case before Clara Smith Hamon goes to trial. Although attorneys for the accused woman continue to remain uncommunicative, persons close to the defense admitted today that a special inquiry is contemplated to present evidence said to connect men prominent financially and politically as ringleaders of an alleged plot to convict the girl.

Evidence now being gathered, it was stated, impends the arrest of persons in Oklahoma and Texas, who, it is charged, have been "framed" to testify against her.

There is now no question that the accused woman, if she is acquitted, can prove, if not by existence of a will, by documents known to be in her possession, claim a substantial share of estate
