

DAUGHERTY NOT APPOINTED FOR HIS ABILITY ALONE

By David Lawrence
(Copyright, 1921, by The Journal)
Washington, Feb. 23.—Something like a chuckle—perhaps it might be better called a smile of satisfaction—came out of the White House today and spread its imaginary echoes over the snow-covered grounds of the executive mansion. It was simply that Warren Harding had contributed by a single remark more to the vindication of the policies of Woodrow Wilson, human being, than any historian of the future could possibly apply to Woodrow Wilson, president.

STANDS BY FRIENDS

For instance, when public criticism of Secretary Daniels appeared to be growing, Mr. Wilson refused to consider a change in the navy department portfolio because, as he expressed it, Mr. Daniels was his trusted friend. When attacks upon Secretary Baker began to accumulate during the war and when Mr. Baker offered to resign, the president would not listen to it and on the contrary wrote him a letter saying he had absolute confidence in him.

DISREGARDED CRITICISM

When Postmaster General Burleson under attack, Mr. Wilson again declined to believe that the attacks were anything more than indirect attacks on himself.

Communist Party Makes Big Gains in Prussian Election

By Karl H. Von Wiegand
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent)
Berlin, Feb. 23.—One of the chief features of the Prussian elections of Sunday, as shown by the later returns, is startling gains made by the Communists. That party, whose program includes the violent overthrow of the government, if need be, to attain dictatorship of the proletariat, has elected, according to present reports, 27 deputies. It is expected that when the complete returns have come in this will be increased to 30 or 31 members of the Prussian parliament.

REWARD NECESSARY

Everyone who has been on the inside of the discussion of the last three months as to whether or not Harry Daugherty should be appointed attorney general knows that there have been two points of view—one that Mr. Daugherty never had been a big enough lawyer in Ohio to justify his elevation to the head of the department of justice and the other that if Mr. Daugherty wasn't appointed it would be a severe setback to party organization, for it would be such a conspicuous example of political ingratitude as to interfere at the outset with the splendid development of united Republican organization, the continuance of which would be indispensable to the reflection of Warren Harding in 1924.

NEEDN'T BE GENIUS

The second view prevailed and along with it was the knowledge that the head of the department of justice need not be a genius as a lawyer, but simply a good executive. The solicitor general and the seven assistants to the attorney general are the legal experts of the department. The attorney general himself shapes broad policies and must be an executive able to conduct negotiations with the world outside his department and keep several thousand of employes working efficiently.

It doesn't take a remarkable lawyer to be attorney general any more than it requires a naval or army officer to run the army or navy departments.

Therefore, the proponents of the second view went out because they said Mr. Daugherty was a good organizer and would at the same time the political considerations involved in the whole business would be made a good attorney general. Mr. Harding and his associates a fair chance to make good, while persons who know Mr. Daugherty intimately know that he is probably disposed to make no defense against photoplays running day and night, seven days a week.

MOVIE PROPAGANDA INQUIRY DEMANDED

Washington, Feb. 23.—(I. N. S.)—Congressional investigation of political activity of certain leaders in the motion picture industry is demanded in a statement issued today by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, head of the International Reform Bureau.

Mr. Harding asserts in his statement that a secret publicity campaign was arranged November 22 by movie men with the object of "scaring the public wiff."

Dr. Crafts asserts in his statement that a secret publicity campaign was arranged November 22 by movie men with the object of "scaring the public wiff," so they will make no defense against photoplays running day and night, seven days a week.

There never were any blue laws, and no reform Sunday into the constitution, or was even proposing any national Sunday law," he added.

HUGHES MAY HAVE TO SHIFT VIEW TO SUIT SENATE

By Lowell Mellett
United News Staff Correspondent
Washington, Feb. 23.—Examination of sentiment in the senate reveals that Charles E. Hughes, as secretary of state, may have to revise his latest publicly expressed views regarding the League of Nations if he is to achieve that harmonious relationship with the senate which President-Elect Harding desires. This apparently will be the case unless there is a shifting of the position of most of the Republican members.

The situation in the senate seems to be that no further consideration will be given the League of Nations. Lodge is against it, Knox is against it, Borah, Johnson and the remainder of the irreconcilables are against it.

WHAT HUGHES FAVORED

Of those mentioned, perhaps the one whose position is most significant is Lodge. His efforts to indorse the League with reservations ended with the vote of March 19, 1920, whereby the senate refused to ratify the Wilson covenant with his amendments. Since then he has taken the position that the league is dead and that the United States has no concern whatever with the corpse.

Some months after the funeral ceremony in the senate, Hughes, campaigning for Harding, said:

"Under a Republican administration, we shall be able to retain all that is good in the proposed covenant (the Wilson league), while we shall adequately protect ourselves from what is ill-advised and dangerous, and, in a sensible manner, we shall do our full share in securing, so far as may be possible, international justice and abiding peace."

"THERE IS NO COVENANT"

It can be said, on the basis of an inquiry made today, that an effort to retain "all that is good in the proposed covenant"—that is to say, to obtain modifications of the present league's character, will not have the indorsement of the senate leaders unless they change their expressed views.

Now could there be found a disposition to support Hughes' declaration later in the campaign that "it is not likely to be difficult to secure the consent of other nations to the modifications and amendments of the covenant which we desire."

"There isn't any covenant, so far as we are concerned," one important senator said. He was unwilling to be quoted, since, as he expressed it, he has no desire to antagonize Hughes and feels confident that complete harmony can be established between the senate and the state department after the latter takes office.

He expressed the view that Hughes would not endeavor to impress any plan for persuading the league's to modify the covenant upon Harding and through Harding on the senate.

PEACE FIRST MOVE

He expects instead, he said, that Hughes will carry out the policy agreed to between Harding and the senate. This policy, as far as can be outlined now, will consist of declaring peace with Germany by resolution and then taking up the problem of forming some kind of an association of nations apart from the league.

March 20, the League of Nations hopes to have in hand all suggestions for amendment of the covenant. Senate sentiment is dead against endorsing before that time to present on behalf of this country any amendments, as it has been suggested Hughes might want to do. Senate leaders do not expect Harding to keep the senate in session after the confirmation session of March 4 for the consideration of such possible amendments.

Boomerang Letter Returns in 3 Years

Oroville, Cal., Feb. 23.—(U. P.)—George Dyer was in Siberia on February 10, 1918. He wrote a letter to his wife here. Dyer returned and yesterday went to the postoffice for his mail. He was given the letter he wrote three years ago and the postmarks showed it had been in every city of any size in Siberia.

Kaiser's Brother Dies

Berlin, Feb. 23.—(I. N. S.)—Duke Ernst Guenther of Schleswig-Holstein, a brother of the former kaiser, died today of heart failure.

getting a large income, to provide which they are compelled to pay taxes.

In discussing the efforts of some of the former's kaiser's supporters to picture his plight as deserving sympathy, Dittmann said it is absurd for the monarchists to attempt to picture the situation of the kaiser and the crown prince as difficult.

"It is well known that both have many millions in private property and can live safe, luxurious lives. Meantime, the German working class has fallen into the deepest misery as a result of the war, which, in the main, is attributable to the kaiser."

"During the last two years many valuables have been taken openly and secretly from the kaiser's palaces to his Holland retreat. It is ridiculous, impossible, to call the kaiser's and the crown prince's situations desperate. The monarchists merely peddle such tales about to impress the German people and sentimentally hope thus to recover the vanished sympathy for a monarchy."

"Beyond this, these lamentations have no significance."

STOP EX-KAISER'S ALLOWANCE, SAYS SOCIALIST LEADER

By John Graudenz
United News Staff Correspondent
Berlin, Feb. 23.—Herr Dittmann, radical socialist leader, would like to see the tremendous sums already turned over and still being allowed the former kaiser, diverted to payments on the German indemnity.

In an interview today Dittmann, told me that if the entente insisted upon limitation of Wilhelm's fortune and the application of the balance to the reparation funds, it would please German workmen generally, who as a whole are angry and resentful that the kaiser is getting a large income, to provide which they are compelled to pay taxes.
