

GOVERNMENT SUES LUMBER COMPANY; FRAUDS ALLEGED

Another alleged timber fraud deal has been unearthed by government agents, according to complaint filed Monday by Assistant United States Attorney John Veatch against the Stoddard Lumber company, Joseph Stoddard, Henry H. Stoddard and Ellen I. Stoddard, as administratrix of the estate of George Stoddard, deceased.

The government alleges that the defendants, through the dummy entry process, fraudulently secured possession of 3240 acres of valuable timber land in Union county. Damages totaling $46,917.60 and costs of the case are asked by the government. The complaint was filed upon order of the attorney general.

PERSONS NAMED

The government names 30 persons in its complaint who are named as the alleged dummy entrants. Prominent among these is Franklin Bramwell, who was recently appointed state bank examiner. The government alleges these people entered upon the land after a distinct understanding with the Stoddard interests that the land would be deeded to the lumber company as soon as the patent was secured. In return, each entrant received all costs and an additional sum, the exact amount being unknown to the government, the complaint states.

NAMES OF FIRMS

The various names under which the lumber company is said to have been organized are given as: Utah Lumber company, Stoddard Bros. company, Stoddard Bros. & Co., and Stoddard Bros. Lumber company. The alleged dummy entrants in this suit are: James H. Adams, Willard Stoddard, Louis J. Lewis, William Y. Stoddard, Helen M. Goddes, Franklin Bramwell, Emily Bramwell, Arthur M. Rawson, Jackson W. Heninger, Samuel Southwick, Francis M. Hiett, Robert A. Latham, Hans J. Neilson, Robert W. Garrett, Lutherford B. Halstead, Joseph Neilson (deceased), Frank L. Buff, Louis Olson and Ernest Wolf.

BANDIT HIT WITH LANTERN; VICTIM IS SHOT IN ARM

When W. E. Dawson, an O-W. R. & N. switchman, attempted to show his dislike of a holdupman this morning by hitting him in the side of the face with a lighted lantern, the bandit in return fired two shots out of his revolver at Dawson. One shot went wild. The other penetrated his left forearm about four inches above the wrist.

After wounding Dawson the highwayman walked down the railroad tracks several blocks and near the Portland Flouring mills held up Roy McCoolum, 542 Gantenbein avenue, and D. A. Murdock, 765 Corbett street.

Dawson contributed 20 cents to the robber's funds, McCoolum but 5 cents and Murdock $4.

Dawson was walking through the Albina yards at 1:35 a. m. when he was ordered to "stick 'em up." After the surprise of the attack had been overcome Dawson "accidentally" struck the robber a powerful blow in the side of the face with his lantern as he lowered it. After firing two shots in return the robber disappeared in the darkness. Inspectors Schum and Powell sent Dawson to the emergency hospital for first aid treatment and then to St. Vincent's hospital, after which they searched the yards for the robber.

McCoolum and Murdock said the robber made one of them turn his back to him while he searched the other. The highwayman is described as 35 years old, six feet tall, and weighing 175 pounds. He wore a black mask, black hat and long yellow coat and carried a small nickel-plated gun.

Shoot, a former employe of the Southern Pacific, was found guilty by the jury of transporting Margie Coombs from Hanford, Cal., to Portland. Before the white slave trial Shoot pleaded guilty to unlawfully securing a pass for Miss Coombs under the pretext that she was his wife. The time that Shoot has spent in jail awaiting trial was taken into consideration by the court in passing sentence.
