Jerusalem, over a roadway carpeted with palm branches and lined with a hosanna-singing throng of worshipers will be fittingly commemorated Sunday in the churches of Portland. Palm Sunday music will be a feature of the service in almost every church where a celebration is held.

Palm Sunday is the annual occasio for confirming children in a few denom inations where this ceremony is re tained, while others give their children final instruction on Palm Sunday pre poratory to the Easter day confirmation service.

The six days between Palm Sunday and Easter day are the most sacred days in the Christian calendar. Many devout Christians who do not practice fasting or penance during the other weeks of Lent, feel it a sacred duty to pay homage of Christ's suffering during e days of holy week.

The Bible story of the first holy week is one full of sadness. It was during cross in order that the human race may enjoy salvation and everlasting life. Sad as the story of Christ's sufferings is, it, hangs the principles of the Christian faith Holy week, as it is termed by the oldest usage, or Passion week, as it is by some ministers, will see a this undertaking. large number of special services this year in Portland's churches. Early morning mass and services of prayer the will be held in some churches ; two series of noon meetings will be held in downtown theatres, and a large number of evening meetings are announced communions, with churches located in all parts of the city. Celebration of the heliest week in the Christian year will be general this season in Port-and.

The meetings Tuesday at 3 and 8 p. m. will be held in Sunnyside Congregational church, and the Wednesday serv- ics will be received Thursday as usices at the same hours will be in the ual. White Temple (First Baptist church). Dr. W. P. White, Northwest regional director of the Moody Bilde institute, will be present at all services. During the last week Miss Edith Brande, secretary pro tem, has mailed letters to prominent church people in the city inviting them to the conferences and requesting them to extend an additional invitation to anyone "whom you believe is or should be interested.
