

MURDER PLOT IS SCIENTIFIC DEATH OF RICH CLUBMAN

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21.—(I. N. S.)—The original theory that Luther F. Graves, wealthy clubman, society favorite and former Yale athlete, who was shot to death Thursday morning, had been killed by a fleeing burglar, was discounted today when the full report of Medical Examiner Dr. Charles E. Long was submitted.

It was revealed that Graves had been wounded three times with a .45 calibre revolver and that the most serious wound upon the body had been made with the weapon held so close that the skin and clothing were burned by the powder. The mystery of Graves' death has not been solved, but the police have important new clues which they hope will lead to an arrest within a day or two. One theory is that instead of being shot by a burglar, Graves was the victim of a deliberate plot against his life. There is evidence on hand indicating that the murderer was accompanied by another man and that they fled in an automobile driven by a woman.

The police have in their possession a black mask which was picked up near the spot where Graves was killed. They had been informed by George Barnett, a chauffeur, that the mask belonged to him and that he had dropped it while returning home from a masquerade party Thursday morning, but they are not satisfied with this explanation.

The police and the district attorney said they were not yet certain that the mask could be eliminated from the crime.

Following the burial of Graves on Sunday, when a great crowd of relatives, friends and curiously curious were at the cemetery, District Attorney Guy E. Moore and several investigators visited the spot where Graves had been shot. It was about 75 feet from his own home and not far from his own garage. They had hoped to get clues from footprints in the mud, but the ground had been so badly trampled since the murder that they were unsuccessful in getting any more data.

The Yale Alumni association, of which Graves was a member, has offered some reward for information leading to the identification of the murderer, while a citizens committee, headed by Mayor George F. Bueh, has offered another reward of $1000.

'CLARA MENTAL SPREE' WIDOW TO FORGIVE

(Continued from Page One) The man: I know the wonderful personality beneath. And I realize what my words mean when I say that in spite of the wrong he did, in spite of the lights held against the lightly broken, Jake Hamon was a Christian.

In her gentle manner she spoke of Jake's father. He, too, she said, regarded her as a marital spouse; just as whiskey makes a physical one. And oh, how I have felt to think of my man drinking whiskey. And how he hated to hurt me by doing it—and still went on!

RECALLS HIS KINDNESS "I remember one night in Chicago when we were dining in a restaurant, and he ordered something to drink. I looked at it, standing in the glass, the curse of his life. I couldn't keep back the tears. And he pushed it away. That night, at least, he drank nothing.

"Through all the years just past—10 of them—each with its life of its own, I never gave up hoping that he would come back to me. And he did come back; too late for happiness to either. But thought of his kindness, we planned at the end is dear to me now.

"This is what I want to tell other despairing wives. Hundreds of them have written to me since the trial began, begging my sympathy and my advice because they are going through what I went through.

"I believe the angels write down all the hopes of all the wives who feel their husbands slipping away, and for every such record send a compensation for some piece of sadness somewhere. These wives must pray: Eagar-eyed women waiting alone; wastifuness upon hours through long procession of nights; rising wearily mornings to look out on defeat; always imploring their God to animate the dust of dead ideals.

"I prayed. I got down on my knees and prayed for her as well as for him. I begged God to send my husband back to me. And he asked that she might find the right way.

"I don't know why God didn't answer my prayer. Perhaps there was bitterness in my heart toward her—never toward Jake.

"Do you think that if he had struck me, beaten me, kicked me as she said he did, I should have killed him?

"Oh, I'd rather have killed myself! My Jake couldn't lift his hand except to honor me.

LAYS WEAKNESS TO DRINK "He always was gentle and kind with me. I hate myself for it, but I am powerless to prevent it.

"I have been criticized for letting him get away from me in the first place; for not fighting hard to keep him.

"But those who talk this way don't understand that the other woman came into my life at a time when I had my hands full with a young baby, and when I most needed my husband's care and love. Olive Belle is ill now; you see it began just after she was born.

"But he adored his children, and no man can be really bad who does.

"They have said he looked forward to being president of the United States some day. That's true. Nor did he care for the post of secretary of the interior. What he wanted to be was then like a mourning veil. Counting chairman of the national committee. He said 'I'll try for that one' through it will put young Jake, our boy, into the White House, the youngest Republican president the country has ever had."

HAPPY DAYS WERE FEARED "The happiest days of my life were those of the convention in Chicago last June. For he was with me then and planning our future. We went about looking at homes he wanted to locate between Washington, where his political interests were and his financial enterprises in the West.

"But those days are over. Jake is dead, and with him his dreams. Yet with the dark door closed between us we are close. For as I know I live, as I know my love for little Olive Belle, I know sure the heart of Jake Hamon, which cannot die, has found understanding. Even though the peace he offered his God was late, I am sure the wrongs were not covered.

"I shall devote the remainder of my life to my boy and girl. Jake will study law; Olive is to continue her music training. They shall have brilliant careers because they are their father's children and inherit his genius.

"Through them I shall teach the best that was in Jake Hamon to live indeed."

Requiem Mass to Be Sung for Late Mrs. C. V. Murphy

Requiem mass will be sung for Mrs. Caroline V. Murphy, widow of Dan B. Murphy, formerly United States attorney for Oregon, at the St. Marys cathedral Tuesday morning at 9:30. Interment will be made in Mount Calvary cemetery.

V. E. Robb Held Up, Robbed of $1.50

V. E. Robb, who lives at 645 Williams avenue, was held up at Cleveland avenue and Jarrett streets Sunday night, about 8 o'clock, by two young men, and robbed of $1.50. Both of the bandits were unmasked, and one of them carried a blue revolver. Robb could not give a good description of the man to the police last night, but motorcycle men were dispatched to the neighborhood.

Fine Race Horses Perish in Flames

West Springfield, Mass., March 21.—(I. N. S.)—Eleven of the country's foremost race horses and breeding stallions were burned to a crisp and two brood mares were scorched so badly they will have to be shot in a fire at the Eastern States Exposition grounds today. The total loss is estimated at $60,000.

Washington Gardner Is Appointed as Head of Pension Bureau

Washington, March 21.—(I. N. S.)—President Harding has selected Washington Gardner of Albion, Mich., to be commissioner of pensions. It was learned at the White House today.

Wed in Wrong State; New Ceremony Tried

Vancouver, Wash., March 21.—After securing a marriage license in Vancouver several weeks ago, Miss Nancy Johnson and Ole Anderson of Ridgefield went to Borng, Or., where they were married by the Rev. Andrew Johnson. Unaware of the law which requires that the ceremony must be performed in the state in which the license is issued, they did not learn of the illegality of their marriage until last week. Saturday afternoon they returned to Vancouver, accompanied by Rev. Johnson, secured another license and a second ceremony was performed.

Farm Hand Killed In Stump Blasting

Dallas, Or., March 21.—Charles Walters, aged about 40, was instantly killed Saturday while blasting stumps on the farm of Walter Domes, near McCoy. The body was found Sunday afternoon when search was made for him after he had failed to return to Domes' home. Walters' home is thought to be somewhere in Washington.

Woman With Many Descendants Dies

Centralia, Wash., March 21.—Mrs. Julia A. Goodwin, widow of Dr. James S. Goodwin, for number 28, residents of Centralia, died Thursday in Portland at the home of a daughter, aged 81 years. She survived by 10 children, more than half a hundred grandchildren and nearly two hundred great-grandchildren.

DEMOCRATS KEEP UP ATTACK ON TARIFF MEASURE

Washington, March 21.—(U. P.)—Democrats, probably with the aid of a few Republicans, will insist on "telling the consumer all about it" when congress takes up embargo legislation or a new emergency tariff bill.

Democrats planned today to prolong debate on the measure while they ceaselessly pound home the fact that an embargo will raise prices to consumers. Senator Harrison, Mississippi, who led the fight against the emergency tariff in the last congress, will again be in the forefront of the battle. Senator Underwood, Democratic leader, will be another battler.

They will take as an instance the case of wool, for which there is probably the most demand for an embargo and try to show that while it will raise the price of clothes, it will benefit the grower but little. They will charge that wool manufacturers having bought large quantities at a low price, now seek to raise prices by means of an embargo, thus cutting off foreign competition and enabling them to dispose of the low priced stores at tempting higher prices.

Friends of the embargo and tariff proposals do not deny it will raise prices. But while the tariff is in effect, they say, measures are necessary to save farmers from ruin and insure the planting of crops adequate to the demands of the nation.

SPRING COMES WITH GLITTER AND WARMTH

(Continued from Page One) lovers swing into the midnight hour will remain remaining proof that "spring has come."

HOTTEST MARCH DAY ON RECORD; TEMPERATURE 80

New York, March 21.—The hottest March day on record was registered today when the United States weather bureau thermometer touched 80 degrees. Sunday's mark, almost a record, was 74.

The open-air hot-dog season began here Sunday, the hottest day of the year so far, when thousands of hardened amusement-seekers thronged Coney island to inspect the scenes of the impending summer revelry. Concessionaires estimated that 100,000 customers streamed through the gates.

Early at Denver, Colo., March 21.—(U. P.)—Mild temperature and sunny skies today marked the first day of spring for Denver. Spring-like weather has prevailed here for three weeks. The weather bureau promises more of the same. Large crowds of picnickers go to the mountains every Sunday.

In Wintry Mood Chicago, March 21.—(U. P.)—Lady Spring had evidently got her dates mixed today when she howled into Chicago bringing the chilliest weather in several weeks. Yesterday, the last day of winter, was sultry. Wilted collars, vestless men and dainty diaphanous garb of women marked winter's exit.

Arrives With Rain St. Louis, Mo., March 21.—(U. P.)—Another proof that the woman is usurping man's role. Miss Spring made her debut today with a blustering wind and driving rain. Mr. Winter exited yesterday under a clear sky with a summer warmth in the air.

Below Freezing St. Paul, Minn., March 21.—(U. P.)—Buds and grass, coaxed out by warm days, shriveled today when a cold north wind sent the thermometer below freezing. A bright sun and clear sky, however, followed rain and hail of the last two days.

Debut Is Glitzy Kansas City, Mo., March 21.—(U. P.)—Official arrival of spring this morning was marked by the "chilliest" weather in a month. The birds sang long and loud in protest.

Snowing at Spokane Spokane, Wash., March 21.—(U. P.)—Can't make Spokane believe it's the first day of spring. It's snowing.

Washington Gardner Is Appointed as Head of Pension Bureau (Continued from Page One) Gardner is a former member of congress from the Third Michigan district, serving from 1884 to 1891. He is a Civil war veteran and for two years was commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. He was born in Morrow county, Ohio, the same county in which the president was born.

Francis Drury, Who Shot Policeman, Dies Salem, Or., March 21.—Francis Drury, who shot and wounded Policeman Newman in Portland a few weeks ago when the latter attempted his arrest, died at the state hospital here Sunday night. Drury, a barber, was shot on parole at the hospital at the time of the shooting. He became suddenly insane again and ran amuck when the patrolman entered his shop in Portland to take him in charge.

Wm. Wilson Resigns International High Commission Place

Washington, March 21.—(U. P.)—The resignation of William Wilson, former secretary of labor, from the international high commission has been accepted, it was announced at the White House.

Abdullah Gardner, Democrat, who resigned from the commission to make room for Wilson, probably will be appointed because of his familiarity with the work of the commission.

It was explained Wilson's resignation was not requested, but Gardner called him to the White House and explained the situation which brought the offer to resign.

KING OF GREECE GOING TO SMYRNA

London, March 21.—(I. N. S.)—King Constantine of Greece will soon go to the Smyrna front to take personal command of the Greek army that is fighting the Turkish nationalists, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Athens today.

The Exchange Telegraph correspondent said that announcement had been made in the Greek capital that the Greek army would be strengthened and that the king would lead it.

The Greek government has begun partial mobilization of the army, giving as an excuse the reports from Smyrna that Mustafa Kemal Pasha, head of the Turkish nationalists, is massing heavy reinforcements in front of the Greek army. The classes of 1913, 1914 and 1915 have been called to the colors.

King Constantine has issued a public statement saying it is necessary to make sacrifices to obtain peace in the Near East.

Athens reports a massacre of Christians by Turkish nationalists at Cesera.

U. S. COURT TURNS BOND MAN LOOSE

(Continued from Page One) a sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission.

OPINION GIVES REASON The major portion of the court's opinion follows: "It is claimed in the present indictment that Eberhardt is entitled to citizenship because he had been convicted of felonies in 1905 and 1907 and confined in the state penitentiary of New Jersey for 18 months, respectively, and, in view of which facts the defendant had knowledge at the time he aided and advised him as stated.

"There is no charge in the indictment that Eberhardt did not in fact possess the requisite moral character or that the defendant made any false testimony on his application for admission.

"It is, of course, the duty of an applicant who has been convicted of a felony to disclose that fact to the court, and of the witnesses to make like disclosure if within their knowledge, and failure to do so may be sufficient ground for setting aside and cancelling the certificate. But it does not follow as a matter of law that because a man has been convicted of a felony he may not thereafter reform and so conduct himself as to satisfy a court that he had become a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as a matter of fact that Eberhardt's convictions of felonies in 1905 and 1907, without more, deprive him of the right to apply for and be admitted a citizen of good moral character. It is sufficient length of time to entitle him to admission. Many cases hold that it is sufficient to determine that question at this time, for no crime is charged against defendant unless it is to be regarded as