Pacific coast manager for the Hollandmerican lint, stated that six new motor ships, carrying freight only, would supplement the three coal burning craft now in operation. Three craft will be supplied by each company and the other three will be operated jointly.

The new motorships are 15,000 deadweight capacity and the engines are of the Deisel type. Space for 1500 tons of refrigerated products will be a feature of the motorships. This is more than double the cooling space on the steam ers now operating.

A number of passenger and freight vessels are under construction for the North Pacific and European traffic and will be ready for service by the first of the year, according to DeLacey.
