

BUILDING BILL OF OMNIBUS TYPES TO BE INTRODUCED

Washington, April 22.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—An effort to put through a public buildings bill of the omnibus type will be made in the present congress, if not during the extra session, then in the regular session which will open next December. The country has been away from normalcy on this subject for a long time, for there has been no omnibus buildings bill since President Taft's day.

Secretary McAdoo opposed such a measure as wasteful, urging that new postoffices should be authorized only when recommended by the postoffice department, cooperating with the treasury with regard to needs and plans for buildings for combination use as post-offices, land offices, federal courts and revenue offices in the smaller cities.

LUMP ALL TOGETHER
The old omnibus plan was to lump together the joint demands of all the congressmen who asked for new buildings, allowing one or more to each rural district, and so balancing the appropriations as to insure a large majority for the bill, because an overwhelming majority of members would be directly interested in buildings for their particular districts.

Since 1913 a few new buildings have been authorized, but not many. The war and the high cost of construction came to McAdoo's aid in withstanding pressure for an omnibus bill. Appropriations were held to a minimum, mostly for improvements and additions to buildings in the large cities where postoffice space had become greatly congested.

DEMAND INCREASED
Now there is increased demand for an omnibus bill. It is argued that in the last eight years many small towns have grown into cities and small cities into large ones, and these communities are pressing for recognition in the shape of federal buildings on sites owned by the government. Various other arguments are advanced. It is said that the time has arrived to encourage building, and that even though a leased site may figure a present saving, the conditions will tend the other way and the old policy of scattering public buildings stimulates local pride and patriotism.

Secretary Mellon of the treasury department has not yet been heard from. His general policy is to discourage new expenditures and to urge the postponement of new projects. The financial situation demands that unusual care be used before opening any new channels for treasury outgo, he says.

MANY TOWNS GROW
A flood of public building bills introduced in congress during the early days of the new session, testified to the insistent demand in congress for new legislation. Hundreds of towns have attained the population and postal receipts which in times gone by were deemed to qualify them for the public building class. The house committee on public buildings and grounds is believed to be strongly in favor of early action. On the opening day of the session bills were introduced by Congressman French of Idaho to provide $100,000 for a building at Nampa, an equal sum at Caldwell, $150,000 for an addition at Coeur d'Alene, $25,000 for an addition at Sandpoint, $10,000 for a site at Weiser and a similar amount for Fayette, all in the state of Idaho.
