

4 CLUBMEN MOTOR THROUGH MACLEAY PARK? SOME DRIVE!

"How many of you have seen Crater lake?"

A scant half dozen rose to their feet at Wednesday's Ad club luncheon in response to Dorsey B. Smith's question.

"How many have climbed to the summit of Mt. Hood?"

There might have been a dozen who claimed to have reached the altitude.

"How many have driven by motor around Fairmount boulevard?"

Twenty-five stood, but from one side of the wall filled room could be heard the question, "Where is it?"

"How many have seen the state fish hatchery at Bonneville?"

Nine tenths of those at the luncheon admitted the experience and there was a cheer of self approval.

"How many have driven an automobile through Macleay park?"

Four promptly stood, including the chairman of the day. Then a roar of mischievous delight swept the room.

There are trails only in Macleay park.

"TOURISTS" ARRIVE

"A Week in Portland for Every Visitor," the slogan of the tourist campaign, brought to some of the Ad men the realization that they had lived a lifetime in the city without discovering the scenic attractions within its borders, not to mention mountain, sea and valley nearby.

With a great ringing of bells, shuffling of brake-clogged wheels and final whistle of escaping steam, Frank Branch Riley brought into the room a group of tourists, including the banker from Nebraska, the reserve bank president from Philadelphia and Algy from England.

DESCRIBES CRATER LAKE

"Yonder mountain was the unquestioned monarch of American peaks, but after its flamings it was cased in ice and snow only to break forth again, cataclysm upon cataclysm, and finally to blow up, leaving a marvelous, intensely blue lake in what was once a flaming caldron," said Riley in his best style, as he indicated the picture of Crater lake.

"How much water did you say there was in the bally hole?" questioned Algy of England.

ALGY OBJECTS

"Here," said the orator, turning to a well conceived painting of Multnomah falls, "is the unquestioned queen of American cataracts. Note the wind-blown wisps of silver spray. You birds never saw anything like that."

Algy of England broke in. "I don't mind being called a silly ass," he declaimed, "but I simply won't go on with this tour if I must be denominated as a bird."

Without their dusters, Algy of England was found to be James W. Palmer, and others were Fred W. Vogler, Arthur Holmboe, Tommy Luke and Miles Standish.

Bond Certification Asked
Salem, May 12.—Certification of $15,000 in bonds is asked of the state irrigation and securities commission by the Enterprise irrigation district of Klamath county. The district comprises 2372 acres near Klamath Falls.

Greeks Object to Countrymen Being Called Suspects

Members of the Greek colony in Portland object to references by the police to men suspected of having knowledge of the Mabel Phillips murder as Greeks. They maintain that none of the men who lived in the house in which the girl is believed to have been slain was a Greek.

commented Tom Gliva, Greek restaurant operator, yesterday. "I took two of the men who lived in the house to the police station, and neither could speak a word of Greek. Greeks in Portland object to reports that their countrymen were implicated in the affair."

To Widen Boulevard
The city council Wednesday overruled the single protest filed, and instructed the city engineer to proceed with plans for the extension and widening of Willamette boulevard from St. Johns avenue to the southwesterly projection of the northwesterly line of Weyerhaeuser avenue. The damages are estimated at $2495 by the city engineer, but the benefits to the same properties are declared to be equal to the damage.
