

DADDIES DEFEND THEIR MOVE TO HOLD RACE MEET

The Daddies' club, in a statement prepared Monday afternoon by its officers and several members, defends itself against attacks made by different patriotic organizations of Portland which have criticized the fathers for sponsoring a race meet Memorial Day.

"Had the Pacific Coast Baseball league scheduled a double header game here May 30 no protests would have been raised," the club said in its statement. NOT FOR PROFIT

"This much has been admitted by some of the leaders of the opposition. If we were not holding the races somebody else would be. Every Memorial day for years there has either been a ball game or races, or both, if the weather permitted."

It is denied in the statement that the club is holding the race meet for commercialism and the profit of its members.

"There is not a salaried officer," says the statement, "in our entire organization composed of 700 fathers of former soldiers, sailors and marines and numbered among whom are a dozen gold star fathers, none of whom has criticized or objected to what we are doing and yet whose boys sleep beneath the sod in far-off France."

AIDS SERVICE MEN
"The only expense of the Daddies' club is one of $12.50 a month for hall rent. The balance of our funds goes to the relief of ex-service men and their dependent families. Some has been expended in sending flowers to funerals of veterans and in supplying automobiles for a number of funerals, but that is all."

In striking back at its critics the club said it had raised and expended thousands of dollars for the aid of former service men, while some people who were criticizing had not spent one dollar.

The statement was signed by L. B. Baketel, president; G. D. Kennedy, secretary; George R. Funtz, G. E. Hamaker, A. M. Crawford, J. A. Mears, J. O. Stearns, A. R. Joy and G. L. Keeler.

Vigilantes Switch, Tar and Feather Man at Hood River

Hood River, May 24.—Following the arrest of a transient named Frank Spill, after an alleged assault on a woman, a vigilance committee was formed Saturday evening and about 8 o'clock, as Spill was leaving the jail to secure his supper, he was hurried into a waiting automobile and, in company of seven citizens, was driven over the highway to a secluded spot near Mosier. Here he was taken into the woods and, after being divested of his clothing, was thoroughly switched, following which he was tarred and feathered. He was allowed to put on some of his clothes and was ordered to march east.

On Sunday morning he arrived in The Dalles and on being taken to his condition, stated that he had been kidnaped from a hotel in Hood River and, after being robbed, had been tarred and feathered. In a report to Hood River, the police of The Dalles admit that the vigilance committee made a good job of the work.
