

SISTER IDENTIFIES WOMAN WHO LOST MEMORY OF SELF

After many hours of conflicting theories, police this afternoon virtually decided that the woman found, half demented, at the Union station Thursday night, is Mrs. Harry Murray, wife of the publisher of a newspaper at Weed, Cal.

The woman, evidently suffering from amnesia, was taken from the California express, the conductor having wired ahead to have her properly looked after. She was clad in her night clothes with street clothes doctored over them and scrutiny of her baggage by the station matron showed that she had made no preparations for such an extended journey.

The police have telegraphed to Murray asking for further details and for more positive identification.

After long quizzing, which developed many rambling stories and several different names, one of which was "Millie Black of Centralia, the police were called on by Mrs. Harry Davis of Prineville, who said the woman is her sister.

By means of a trunk check the police learned that she had boarded the train at Weed, Cal. The woman said she was en route to Prineville to visit Mrs. Harry Davis, but it is the opinion of the police that she had been wandering about for several days or probably longer.

BROTHER AT CENTRALIA

For several hours the police were unable to obtain much information by questions. Her mind had cleared but little this morning and her condition was not much improved. A brother, Bert Black, lives in Centralia. Her mother lives at Chehalis.

"I am confused. I cannot remember," she told the police.

IN NERVOUS CONDITION

She was in a very nervous condition and physically and mentally ill. Her right eye twitched almost constantly and her conversation was incoherent. She appeared to have lost control of many of her muscles.

Physicians will examine her today and endeavor to diagnose her illness.

HAWLEY APPEAL TO COME UP JUNE 21

Oregon City, May 27.—Attorneys in the case of Hawley vs. Hawley, in which Marjorie Hawley appealed from the decision of the circuit court in her suit for divorce from Willard P. Hawley Jr., have been notified that the case will come before the supreme court June 21, word having been received Thursday from Arthur Benson, clerk of the supreme court.

Judge Bagley ruled in favor of the defendant, who filed a counter claim for divorce after Mrs. Hawley started suit when the case came up in the circuit court. Mrs. Hawley was denied her claims for alimony and property interests, and also for custody of the 3-year-old child of the couple.

She was granted temporary custody of the child and $250 monthly for its care until the case was settled in the supreme court. Appearing for Mrs. Hawley are Wallace McCamant of Portland, Gavin McNab of San Francisco and E. C. Latourrette and C. Scheubel of this city, while the attorneys for the defendant are Griffith, Latta & Allen, Cassius Peck of Portland and T. B. Dimick of this city.
