Mrs. Blakeley Will Face New Trial on Late Indictment

Medford, Or., May 28.—Mrs. Myrtle Blakeley, former Jackson county treasurer, twice tried on charges connected with the failure of the Bank of Jacksonville, faces a third trial, the second at the present term of court, unless a demurrer filed in her behalf is sustained.

Her next trial will be on an indictment recently returned against her, charging aiding and abetting a bank cashier to make false entries to deceive a bank examiner.

Rawley Moore, county prosecutor, refuses to say whether he will again place her on trial on the malfeasance charge, but her friends and others hold that this charge will be dropped.

TITLE & TRUST CO. WITHDRAWS HELP

Plans to Rehabilitate Central Oregon Irrigation Co. Abandoned Because of Objections.

The Title & Trust company will have nothing further to do with its proposed rehabilitation of the Central Oregon Irrigation company project, according to a letter forwarded to the governor, as chairman of the desert land board, by the company.

The company in its letter says that it had attempted to "be the agency through which a desert waste would be turned to productive fields," but that it had become convinced "there would always be an effort in some quarters to load us with the sins of omission or commission of the old company," and that, for these reasons, it had determined to terminate all negotiations for the purchase of the remaining rights now held by the old company and the subsequent completion of the project.

The Title & Trust company, acting for principals who possessed the means to finance the Central Oregon project, had agreed to purchase from the old company certain rights which would remain to it after it had fulfilled its obligations to the state and the settlers on the project. It had proposed to enter into a contract with the state, through the desert land board, for the reclamation of about 25,000 acres of land between Redmond and Prineville. The flow of the Deschutes river was to be supplemented by water stored in a reservoir to be constructed at Crain Prairie, and it was estimated that the project would cost, when completed, approximately $1,000,000. The attorneys for the settlers upon the old Central Oregon project objected to the Title & Trust company plan before the desert land board, which delayed giving its approval.

If the bond issue is carried it is proposed to borrow the money from the state highway commission, giving the bonds as security.
