GOMPERS WINS

IN TEST VOTE

break away from Lewis and place a member of their own union, Robert Hewitt, in the race for president of the federation, thus splitting the Lewis vote.

The convention has become a political convention with all the big issues crowded into the background by electioneering and the question of whether Lewis, 41-year-old head of the United Mineworkers of America, can out Samuel Gompers, the 71-year-old veteran of the labor movement, from the presidency of the federation.

With both sides claiming victory today, the cautious ones are waiting developments before forecasting results.

FACES CRISIS

It is conceded on all sides that the veteran head of the federation faces the greatest crisis of his career. The announcement of Lewis' candidacy caused consternation in the Gompers camp. The fear now is of a stampede for the younger leader.

According to Lewis' supporters, he would not have announced his candidacy had he not been assured enough votes to win. They claim he has already 20,000 of the 35,000 votes of the convention. Gompers' supporters make claim of more than 23,000 and pledged a clean sweep of the executive council is predicted in event of Lewis' election.

MAY VOTE THURSDAY

The superstitious ones predict that old General Coincidence will win for Lewis. It was in Denver 17 years ago that Gompers faced the first and only defeat of his career and then, as now, a head of the miners' union was his opponent. The election may be held Thursday, according to the present outlook.

A drama will be staged whatever the outcome. Either Gompers, after an undisputed sway of nearly 40 years, will be made to surrender to youth or despite his 71 years will show enough fight to score the greatest triumph of his career. The Lewis' camp is in the first serious attempt to oust him. The younger leader is the first candidate to oppose him with sufficient strength to be a formidable opponent since John McBride, head of the miners' union, defeated him in 1894.

WOULDN'T OUST GOMPERS

Lewis has promised more aggressive policies in the federation and the younger element is flocking to his stand.

OUT AT WAVERLEY CLUB WITH PACIFIC NORTHWEST GOLFERS

Reading from the left, the players are, Bon Stein, Seattle; Jack Straight, Waverley; H. T. Gardner of Vancouver, B. C., and Rudolph Wilhelm of Portland, winner of the qualifying round. ard with the cry that only a change in administration can save the federation in its war with the "open shop" movement.

The Gompers' camp, on the other hand, is using the argument that with the federation facing the gravest crisis in its history this is no time to change horses in mid-stream.

Frank Farrington, head of the Illinois miners, has left Denver. According to reports he will not be here to oppose Lewis, to whom he has shown open hostility.

The Lewis followers emphasize that there is no move to oust Gompers from the federation. In gratitude for his great services to labor they are planning to make him president emeritus with a life pension, but friends of the veteran doubt whether he will accept it.

The biggest fight on the floor of the convention is scheduled for today, when the Irish resolutions will be reported by the committee. The committee is said to have modified the major resolution which demands recognition of Ireland. The boycott resolution, it is said, will be reported unfavorably and the hottest fight will come on it.

The talk now is of the coal miners, the railroad workers and the metal trades forming a powerful coalition to secure control of the federation with the building trades and other large crafts assuring adequate representation on the executive council, the central administrative body of the federation.

Such a coalition, it is said, would mean the inauguration of a sweeping program of nationalization as proposed by the railroad unions which now have a resolution before the convention demanding action by the council to apply the principle of government ownership and democratic control to the steel industry, the coal mines and other basic industries as well as the railroads.

With the declaration that there are numerous and flagrant attempts to intimidate the school teachers of the country in the exercise of their rights and duties as citizens outside of the school, the committee on education of the American Federation of Labor in its report to the convention today condemned the Lusk law in New York and urged "other efforts to control the thought of teachers."

The committee charged that the "business and employing interests" are attempting to compel the teachers "to serve the interests of propaganda in the classroom."

"The committee declared the Lusk law designed to place the fullest possible restraint upon the public mind," it said. "The business and employing interests boast they have the school, the pulpit and the press," says the report of the committee.

"This boast may be blatant and overconfident, but exceedingly powerful forces are working constantly to make it a reality."

The committee desires to stress the fact that upon this vital struggle against reaction, the American Federation of Teachers holds front line trenches and is waging the good fight not for the teachers themselves but for all organized labor and all the people."

The convention adopted the recommendation of the committee that since the teachers are in a strategic position, both for the collection of information and for its effective use with the public opinion, the publicity bureau of the American Federation of Labor cooperate with the American Federation of Teachers to place the fullest possible restraint upon the public mind.

The Kansas industrial court law was again condemned by the American Federation of Labor here today. The convention unanimously approved the report of the executive council condemning the industrial court plan.

NO PIRATES REPORTED
A modern buccannering vessel has appeared in the highways of the seas seeking loot like the practical craft of the old Spanish main. Ships and crews have gone without a trace.

The mystery of the disappearance of the vessel was the more tantalizing because it all happened so short distance from Washington—off Cape Hatteras.

same route as the Cyclops, which disappeared mysteriously with her captain and crew during the war.

Miss Wormell has had the handwriting on the note brought in from the Deering identified as that of Chief Engineer Bates.

The Hewitt may have dropped out of sight to engage in "gun running" to Ireland, according to an opinion expressed by persons close to the British embassy here.

While four departments of the government were officially concerned in the investigation, other departments were interested in the mystery and romance of the disappearance. The coast off Cape Hatteras is wild and seldom approached.

It would not be impossible for a twentieth century Captain Kidd to hide there with his hand. It is suggested that such a pirate might be using a submarine in his raids.

S. S. WILLIAM O'BRIEN ONE OF SHIPS REPORTED MISSING
New York, June 21.—(U. P.)—The Deering followed practically the steamer William O'Brien was revealed today as one of the five American vessels which have disappeared mysteriously.

Lawrence Richey, investigator for Secretary Hoover, said the William O'Brien was lost two months ago, apparently 700 miles out. He is here searching in shipping circles for any information regarding the lost vessel.

Richey said the William O'Brien started one trip, but was forced to put back following a dispute between the captain and chief engineer. With a new engineer she began another trip, from which she never returned.

The grim side of the mystery was revealed by Richey, who said he is going to Cape Hatteras to investigate a report that several bodies have been washed ashore there. He believed it possible that the bodies were those of sailors from some of the lost vessels.
