Loss Cut; Cannery Reopens for Season Wheat Yield of 85

Albany, Or., July 6.—Tension that had been caused by fear that Linn county's entire fruit crop would be left to rot on vines and trees was relieved Tuesday by the opening of the Puyallup & Sumner Fruit Canning company's plant here.

Authority to reopen the cannery was received by W. R. Scott, manager, who announced that all local offerings will be accepted until the end of the canning season next fall. At present Royal Anne cherries, blackcaps, raspberrice and loganberries are being taken. The cherries are bringing 4 cents; blackcaps 6-cents and loganberries 3 ½ cents.

The opening of the Albany cannery was made possible by the subscription of $25,000 worth of stock by local people.

New York, July 6.—(I. N. S.)—The cotton market opened easier at a decline of 8 to 16 points. Prices at Liverpool were lower than had been expected, which, together with hedge selling and heaviness in foreign exchange, chiefly explained the setback here. On the declines Wall street and the trade were fair buyers, but at the end of the first 15 minutes the local-list was rather heavy at a net loss of 15 points on October.

Farmer's Busy Harvesting Quinaby, Or., July 6.—The lack of rural mail delivery on July 4, was all that marked the day from others in this section, as farmers very generally cut, raked or stacked hay. Nor was Sunday exempt, as practically all loganberry yards were in full blast. But the record of Fourth of July accidents stacked up because of the hay making, which has become a time of tragedy to the nesting China pheasants. The mower severs the fewl's legs from its body as the faithful mother refused to leave her eggs unprotected until the machine is upon her. Hay baling began Tuesday with the finest hay crop of clover ever harvested in this section.
