

PUBLIC CLAMOR FOR ACTION ON TAX BILL GAINS

Congress Realizes Delay Is Causing Uneasiness in Both Parties; Harding Hopes for Speed

By David Lawrence
(Copyright, 1921, by The Journal)
Washington, July 9.—Public opinion is making itself felt in the national capital. The impatience of the country over the failure of congress to get started on a program of tax revision has penetrated both the legislative and executive branches of the government.

Letters of complaint from prominent business men and most of them Republicans have reached congress, and while it is true that the average man outside of Washington has little conception of the immense amount of work involved in shaping a tariff bill, it is fact that most of the criticism has been placed upon the preference given to consideration of the tariff ahead of the tax question. Representative Mondell, Republican leader of the house, who is as conscientious a public servant as the Republican party has ever had, makes the point of the tremendous labor the ways and means committee has had before it in shaping a tariff bill, and requests that this same committee could obviously handle only one thing at a time. The ways and means committee unfortunately is charged with the task of making both the tariff and tax bills. There is no other committee to which the revenue measure could have gone while the ways and means committee worked on the tariff. But as to the house bill the present situation is not that the ways and means committee has been wasting time, for it has been working hard both night and day on the tariff bill, but that it gave right of way to the tariff on the basis of alleged overwhelming opinion from the country in favor of the tariff. In other words, changes increased public opinion, it is really partly due to the failure of the country to assert its wishes unmistakably.

DIFFERENCES SERIOUS
It now becomes apparent that there are serious differences of opinion on the tariff and that many of the advocates of a permanent tariff are in doubt as to whether any bill enacted in the session will not have to be changed in a month, as the result of the constantly changing economic conditions throughout the world.

As for the tax question, on the other hand, there is no division of opinion among disinterested observers that the country would approve of prompt action on the tax question ahead of tariff revision.

The truth is the agricultural group in congress, as well as other elements representing class interests, has demonstrated again that a minority which can prompt veto power in the senate can frequently get a majority and can practically dictate the course that will be taken.

President Harding is frankly disturbed about the situation. He realizes that congress should have tackled the tax question first. He indicated as much when the problem was first submitted to him, but felt reluctant to insist upon his point of view. He now wishes he had put his foot down hard and compelled action on the revenue measure ahead of the tariff. On the other hand there seemed to be as much noise made at that time about tariff revision as taxes. The article element was the inarticulate. The mass of people who had little interest in the tariff question failed to speak out about taxes. They took it for granted that changes after what had been said in the last campaign would reduce taxes at once without further reminder from the country.

DELAY NOT FATAL
The delay, however, has not been fatal. The warning from the country has come opportunely. Congress is bestirring itself. Just as the tariff voted on by the house, the ways and means committee of the house will get at the tax question. Meanwhile, the senate will debate on the tariff.

President Harding hopes that the discussion of the tax bill in both the senate and the house will not require much time. He figures that a tax bill can be gotten through both houses of congress much more rapidly than a tariff measure. In the first place, there are not so many changes to be made in the revenue law, and in the second place the chances are that the time the revenue measure agreed upon by house leaders in conference with the treasury department and the White House, will not have to be rewritten in the senate. Thus a good deal of time may be saved which under other circumstances would be lost in the senate. The president hopes that the party will caucus and get the tax bill ready by autumn at the latest.

Domestic Given Spanking Given $100 Judgment

Bend, July 9.—Ruth Millering, young domestic in the family of John C. Rhodes of this city, today secured $100 damages in a civil action brought because her employer had spanked her. He punished the girl, with her father's permission, he explained, after Ruth had left the two Rhodes children, less than 5 years old, locked alone in the house for hours.
