

TUBERCULOSIS IS SOCIAL PROBLEM, SAYS DR. PALMER

Dr. George Thomas Palmer, eminent tuberculosis specialist of Illinois, consultant and director of the National Tuberculosis Association and a member of the United States public health service, addressed a large audience of physicians, nurses and social workers at Central library Wednesday evening on "Tuberculosis Control." Dr. Frederick Stricker, state health officer, presided over the meeting and the speaker was introduced by Dr. Ralph Matson.

"Tuberculosis is a big problem as all civilization. It is a social, not a medical problem, and the biggest social problem there is," said Dr. Palmer.

It is only within the past few years that any effort has been made for specialization in the treatment of tuberculosis. The study of the disease has been made attractive to other medical students or nurses in training and the result was that when the thousands of tuberculous soldiers were turned back on their feet, the means of caring for them. Not only was the country not ready to meet its tuberculosis problem then—it is still unable to meet it and the tuberculous soldier will be a big problem in this country for many years to come. In our effort to solve it we need the interest and support of all volunteer agencies against the disease, political and other influences.

"The most gruesome slogan I have ever heard is that which a few years ago was sounded by so many physicians to their tuberculous patients. It was, 'Go west and rough it.' If there is one thing that a tuberculous person should not do it is to rough it and next to that he should not be placed beyond the touch of friends and relatives, for in treating tuberculosis the heart and soul need treatment quite as much as the liver and lungs. It is a depressing disease and is almost sure to breed pessimism and these things must be battled against just the same as the invasions of the physical disease.

CONDITIONS CHANGED

"After the sanatoria—what? is a question that I am frequently asked and my answer is: Nurses, clinics, dispensaries. The stigma that used to attach to tuberculosis is rapidly disappearing. A few years ago I went to a small town to conduct a clinic and I actually had to go out and hunt up a couple of tramps who were willing to peel off their shirts and submit to an examination for $1 apiece. Recently I went to the same town and 25 other physicians with me. We had 75 people in the waiting room at one time and among others we examined the principal of the school, a banker and others of equal prominence. This shows what education will do, but we need more education. In fact, it is one of the big factors in the treatment of the disease."

WOMAN IS FREED; ONE AWAITS FATE

Los Angeles, Cal., July 22.—(U. P.)—Eric Mullikane sat by Edith Lundberg's side in Judge Houser's court late yesterday.

She heard a jury return a verdict finding Mrs. Lundberg "not guilty" of murder in the first degree.

Today Eric Mullikane faced the court charged with a similar crime.

The charge of murder in Eric Mullikane's case resulted from the finding of a newborn, nameless baby, strangled with a lace handkerchief, in a trunk sent by Miss Mullikane to a storage warehouse.

Attorneys Vergo, Wilson and Welts represented the defense in the opening of the murder trial. Miss Mullikane's extensive legal array is financed by Mrs. Angela Kaufman, wife of a millionaire.

Today Eric Mullikane announced that the defense would be temporary insanity, the same explanation upon which Edith Lundberg yesterday won her freedom.

DR. STONE'S BODY IS NOT RECOVERED

Banff, Alberta, July 22.—(U. N. S.)—Mrs. W. B. Stone, wife of the president of Pacific university, Lafayette, Ind., who lost her life while climbing in the Canadian Rockies, is recovering today from the effects of exposure and lack of food entered while she awaited the arrival of rescuers. At present Mrs. Stone is under care of a nurse in a camp on Marshall creek, but it is expected she will be brought to Banff in a few days.

Guides and parties of mountaineers are continuing the search for the body of Dr. Stone, which, contrary to previous reports, is not at the bottom of a chasm but is somewhere near the foot of a rock chimney, a towering pinnacle of rock on the slope of Mount Anson. Mrs. Stone has described the spot minutely, but as yet the search has been unsuccessful.

Details of the tragedy brought here by a member of the party that rescued Mrs. Stone throw new light on the accident, and alter some of the circumstances described in earlier reports. According to this later report, Dr. and Mrs. Stone had almost reached the top of Mount Anson when they encountered the rock chimney.

Dr. Stone was above his wife, unroped, while Mrs. Stone was roped to a rock. He was testing the rock above him when the rock on which he was standing gave way and he was hurled over his wife and fell down the mountain to a spot difficult of access.

Mrs. Stone lowered herself as far as possible by means of the rope, but could not reach her husband. She attempted to leap to another ledge, but fell into a crevice and was marooned there five days without food. The only water she had was from a small stream which trickled down the mountain side during the day, when the snows melted.

'BLACK SOX' CASE NEAR DECISION

Chicago, July 22.—(U. N. S.)—The baseball scandal case will be in the hands of the jury within 24 hours. It was indicated today by attorneys for the remaining "Black Sox" and the one alleged gambler involved in the "throwing" of the 1919 world's series.

Although technically still listed among the defendants George "Buck" Weaver and Oscar "Happy" Felsch are virtually free today of charges that they participated in the plot. Judge Hugo H. Friend has made it plain that he will not countenance a verdict of "guilty" against these players.

FANS SIGN PETITION

Whether or not Weaver and Felsch will be restored to good standing in organized baseball, however, depends upon the verdict of Judge M. M. Landis, arbiter of baseball affairs.

A petition signed by 10,000 fans asking the reinstatement of Weaver is to be filed with Owner Comiskey of the White Sox, as soon as the player is exonerated, according to his attorney, Thomas D. Neal.

Judge Friend also indicated that no conclusive evidence involving Carl Zerk of St. Louis, one of the alleged gamblers in the plot, had been introduced and that he also would free Zerk should the jury return a verdict against him.

CHARACTER WITNESSES TESTIFY

The morning session in court was taken up with the examination of character witnesses for Zerk, whom the state contends is the man who went by the name of "Bennett, lieutenant of Arnold Rothstein."

One of the main purposes of the examination of the witnesses was to impeach the testimony of Harry Redmond, East St. Louis picture exhibitor, who testified he had been told that Zerk had been pointed out as "that little red-headed fellow who started the whole thing (the 'throwing' of the series)."

It is reliably understood that Wood has found they are not prepared for this step.

President Harding, after a study of the report, is expected to name the new governor of the islands, with Wood appearing as a likely choice.
