CITYRESTSITS PHONE RATE CASE: DEFENSE IS NEXT

After three weeks of toilsome advance the first phase of the telephone rate rehearing before the public service commission came to an end Friday afternoon and the commission took an adjournment until Monday morning at 10 o'clock when the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company will start its defense.

According to the estimate of James T. Shaw, attorney for the company, it will require from three to four days for the company to present its side of the case before the commission. This, however, is his estimate of the time necessary for the orderly presentation of the evidence the company has, and does not take into consideration the drag of extended cross examination which more than likely will add days to the calcula-

Friday afternoon closed the cases Oswego, Lake Grove and surrounding communities, and also that of Portland, dearing the decks for the company to

for Oswego added their testimony to the flood that has gone into the record in rotest against the toll charges now established for the suburban communities. Mrs. G. H. Pettinger, president of the Oswego Women's club, testified that she had abandoned her club activities be-cause of the financial burden placed upon her by reason of the toli charges. She insisted that the Oswego women needed the use of the telephone to the same degree as those resident in Portland and that the imposition of the toll charge, which was beyond the financial ability of many of the residents of her community to meet, took away from the women there much of the pleasure and enjoyment which comes to the housewife through her ability to keep in touch with her friends and acquaintances without abandoning her home duties. PHONE TAKEN OUT

Mrs. Sara H. Evans gave her story and said that she had been compelled to take her telephone out because of the increased outlay resulting from the imposition of the toll charge.

Mrs. I. Lord, L. L. Sayage, J. W. Huffman, Mrs., G. A. Gilmore and Arthur Macveagh all added their relations to the Oswego protest. Their testimony was much the same, all protesting against the toll charges and insisting that their community was a part of Portland in commercial, business and social interest, had the benefit of other utility services at the Portland rate and that the same treatment should be ac-

Macveagh added a spice of humor to the afternoon by his testimony. He said chapter of Micah. that the service between Portland and Oswego was "punk and no good." And he added that since the tolls went into effect he had "talked so fast that they told him to slow up, and the slower he talked the more it cost him," which he contended was unfair.

CALLS CHARGE OUTRAGEOUS

"The idea of paying $2.50 a month to have a telephone on the wall to look at and then being obliged to pay $4 a month for talking through it is outrageous," he contended. In closing the Portland case Assistant

City Attorney Tomlinson put 67 letters into the record from Portland telephone users protesting the increased rate and the service given. In addition, Tomlinso gave a list of names and addresses of phone users who had wanted to appear in person and give their testimony. He had made a summary of their complaints, he said, in order to save the time

Tomlinson also asked that the com-pany be required to give him the cost of desk set, maintenance and repairs, contending that the extra 25 cent monthly charge for desk sets was out of proportion with the service rendered WANTS ACCESS TO BOOKS

He also asked that the Pacific and American companies be required to fur-nish access to the books showing the original cost of all independent companies in Oregon which had been acquired by the Pacific company, and insisted if that information showed to the commission that these purchased plants had been put in at advanced valuations it should make a revaluation and a consequent reduction of the rate base.

Tomlinson told the commission that he had been informed that the Home telephone plant had cost the Pacific comany approximately $2,000,000, and that it had been put into the Pacific valua-tion at $1,500,000. He insisted that it would be just and fair for the company to add to its rate base the cost of giving Pacific service to those Home subscribers which came to it with the consolidation, but that beyond this it ought not to go in equity. He suggested to the commission that it make an investigation into this matter and take it into consideration in its final decision as to the rates to be charged for Portland
