Episcopalians Plan a Centennial Missionary Celebration for the Fall Months

sstant Episcopal church of America for the celebration of the centennial of the founding of the missionary society in this country. Under the immediate direction of Bishop Walter T. Sumner and B. Dean Vincent, who has been appointed as national committeeman from the diocese of Oregon, special meetings are being arranged for beginning in September and lasting through the fall.

Pageants depicting the progress of the church as it has advanced in America will be held in various churches in the aside as a day for special thanks offering for the work accomplished.

Founded 100 years ago, the missionary ociety followed the frontiers of the United States west and in many cases preceded them. Missions were estab-lished in the Middle West and West as the communities were settled by white people and they in turn became parishes when fully organized.

The history of the missionary society in Oregon is that of the church. May 11, 1851, the Rev. William Richmond ar rived in Portland to establish the first nission of the Episcopal church. The town at that time had some 1500 inhabitants and the principal buildings consisted of two churches, a school building, and two saw mills.

Two years later the first convocation was held in St. Paul's church at Oregon City. Three clergy were present. In 1854 Bishop Thomas Fielding Scott, known as the builder, was appointed to the newly created diocese of Oregon. He presided over the diocese until his death in 1866. hop Morris was then appointed and held the position until 1906. Bishop Charles Scadding was then chosen to fill the vacancy created by the death of shop Morris. He died May 14, 1914, and the place was then filled by Bishop Sumner, incumbent.

From one mission in the old Oregon territory the church has steadily grown and in the state of Oregon at the present time there are 41 parishes and several and St. Johns, Three church schools are in operation in the town, St. Helen's are in operation in the town, St. Helen's Free Methodists to one in Mount Tabor. Beside the parishes and schools the church controls the Good Samaritan hospital, one of the largest and best equipped hospitals in the state The church plans to hold the general convention in Portland in the fall of 1922. More than 3000 clergy and laymen will attend the conference.
