

DAUGHERTY MUM IN FREAR ATTACK. ON DYE EMBARGO

Washington, Sept. 9.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—On July 18, 1921, Representative James A. Frear of Wisconsin, prominent Republican of the ways and means committee, wrote a letter to Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general. Although the distance between their offices is little more than a mile, and although Postmaster General Hays has humiliated the postal service, Frear has received no answer.

Frear is inclined to suspect that it is not the fault of the postal service Daugherty is just too busy—perhaps. Fact is Mr. Frear's letter contained prominent mention of the dye monopoly, and suggested that while the attorney general is out prosecuting war contractors, he should give attention to what the Wisconsin congressman calls the "most flagrant case of all."

FREAR HAS DATA

Frear, who has been giving the dye affair considerable attention himself, offered to place the information he has gathered in the hands of the attorney general.

"The great power and influence of the chemical monopoly will be thrown against any effort to compel restitution to the government of many millions of dollars in property, for which the stockholders have only 2 per cent value," he wrote, "and this same power that sought to force validation by congress of the sale of dyestuff patents, and spent over $100,000 for lobbying in order to secure dye legislation, will attempt to reach administrative as well as legislative action."

Since Mr. Frear wrote this letter to Daugherty he has written another to Senator Boies Penrose, chairman of the finance committee of the senate, where the battle has since been raging over the question of imposing an embargo on dyes, a plan urged by the Chemical Foundation, the head of the dye monopoly, but rejected by the house of representatives.

OTHERS SEND LETTERS

In this later letter Frear points out that Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of the Navy Denby have been persuaded to write letters to the senate committee in support of an embargo. Frear had said in his letter to Daugherty that the trust "will attempt to reach administrative as well as legislative action." Alluding to the letters of Weeks and Denby, the congressman says:

"I have no fear of their influence (that is, the dye interests) either in your committee or in the body you represent, but I do express concern over any power that can secure such letters from such high sources, and, more important, that apparently has endeavored to another effort made to have the government bring legal proceedings to get aside the Chemical Foundation, who were at that time He informed Penrose about his difficulty in hearing from Daugherty, remarking that it is impossible to believe that this is due to an oversight. The letter to Daugherty especially had for its subject a resolution he had introduced in the house requesting the attorney general to sue the trust."

That in 1919 the alien property custodian sold 4000 alien chemical dye patents to the Chemical Foundation; that the sale was arranged by Francis P. Garvan, Joseph H. Choate Jr. and Ramsey Hoagland, who were at that time officers of the bureau of investigation for the government and at the same time president, attorney and patent adviser of the Foundation company; that they prepared an order which permitted the sale at $250,000 for property worth not less than $10,000,000; that they arranged for private sale and without competition purchased the property for their company.

"The public complains over punishment of 'little fellows,' said Frear's letter to Daugherty, "and those superficial motives often question prosecutions that may serve political ends, but the case presented by the resolution is bipartisan in character; it challenges the confidence of the people in the integrity of public officials; and it affects prominent ex-officials who set an example of public irresponsibility before their subordinates and before the country."

NO OMNIBUS BILL TO BE REPORTED TO HOUSE

Washington, Sept. 9.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—Until a few days ago it had been expected that a bill would be reported at the present session of congress for construction of additions to postoffice buildings where space is congested. The treasury and postoffice departments are preparing a list of such cities for preferred treatment. Salem, Or., is described as one of the offices to be included.

Republican members of the house committee on public buildings, however, have held a quiet meeting and decided that they will not report an omnibus bill to include these offices, fearing that they could not head off the hungry demand for other towns not included in the department recommendations.

In exceptional cases, it is said, separate bills for relief may be reported, but each town's case will have to stand by itself.
