

LIVESTOCK FAIR OUTLOOK LAUDED BY BUSINESS MEN

Beneath the half-finished five-acre addition to the Pacific International Livestock exposition building in North Portland, Tuesday afternoon, the first "exhibit" was held.

It consisted of nearly 100 representative Portland business men who came out to see what the exposition directors have wrought in transforming a lowland fill into the livestock show center of the United States and to make plans for the manufacturing and commercial exhibits that the new buildings are to house.

The first result of the meeting was a volunteer committee to arrange for exhibits by local business interests. It consists of F. A. Spencer, Allen & Lewis, chairman; H. J. Frank of Blunauer Frank Drug company and president of Associated Industries of Oregon; Julius L. Meier of Meier & Frank, president of the 1923 exposition; E. A. Clark of the King Food Products company, E. C. Sammons of the United States National bank and D. C. Freeman, manager of Associated Industries.

F. S. Stimson, H. J. Stubbs and William M. Ladd were the speakers and Frank Robertson, treasurer of the Pacific International Livestock exposition, presided.

Charles E. Rumelin offered to pay for 50 square feet of exhibit space as a contribution. "I am not an exhibitor," he said, "but I am interested in any other citizen might be in seeing the exhibit a success. I will pay for 50 square feet and it can be used for community exhibits or for any other purpose that will serve best, and I would like to see others do likewise."

O. M. Plummer and Robertson showed the visitors about the grounds. The new buildings, covering five acres and making a total of 10 acres of exposition buildings, are being constructed from a $100,000 legislative appropriation.

Plants Are Studied To Gain Efficiency; Employ Standards

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Never have manufacturers and managers of this section studied their own plants and methods as they are doing now. They have come to realize that efficiency is more important than the cost of labor and that the proper use of capital as represented by buildings, equipment and machinery is as necessary as efficiency of labor.

They are concentrating on the output per unit of force, both capital and labor, and if they are demanding that employees maintain a standard of productivity, they are also demanding that the capital employed be equally efficient.

Curran, G. O. P. Man, To Oppose Hylan at Election This Fall

New York, Sept. 14.—(I. N. S.)—Henry H. Curran, who won the Republican nomination for mayor on the fusion ticket, will oppose John F. Hylan, present Democratic mayor, who was nominated without opposition, at the city election this fall. Curran polled as many votes as his three opponents, F. H. Laguardia, R. L. Haskell and W. M. Bennett.

Joseph Shallock, manager for James J. Hines, defeated anti-Tammany borough president who charged fraud, was in a serious condition today. While recovering from a stroke, he was surrounded by signatures, automobiles drove up, five men jumped out and assaulted Shallock, who declared his assailants were police degrading to prove fraud by comparison of signatures, automobiles drove up, five men jumped out and assaulted Shallock, who declared his assailants were police degrading to prove fraud by comparison of signatures.

He will remain acting chief of the division of mines of the bureau of science. To fill his place an effort is being made to secure Dr. Edwin T. Hodge, with the geology department last year, but who resigned to take up commercial mining engineering and construction. He is at present in British Columbia.

SECOND MUNICIPAL GOLF LINKS TO BE READY NEXT YEAR

So popular has the municipal golf links at Eastmoreland proven to be that the city park bureau is contemplating building a second course on the section of the old county poor farm, on Canyon road, just outside the city limits, leased last year by the city. The new course will be ready for playing next summer, according to present plans, Commissioner Pier said.

The section consists of 202 acres of rolling land and was leased by the city for 50 years in 1920. An old house now stands on the ground and the conversion into a clubhouse can be easily made, Pier said. The cost of constructing a golf course would be very little, he said, for the good to be gained.

506 OUT ON SUNDAY

The number of people taking up the game at the links has been rapidly increasing since its existence. The first playing on the course was done in July, 1918. Last Sunday 506 players were on the course and a large number, seeing the crowd, did not register.

"If the course on the farm is built," Pier said, "it will relieve the congestion at Eastmoreland by giving the fans on the west side a place of their own to go. The links are just outside the city limits and within easy reach of town."

MANY GO IN MORNING

"Golf as a game is one that many people are interested in. The value of municipal links as a place for the citizens to get good healthful exercise is beyond conception. The proof of its success is to be found in the large number on the course during holidays and Sundays. Even on week days the number is surprising, for many go out early in the morning for a few holes before the day's work."
