

ZOO INMATES ARE DIVIDED ON ISSUE OF MOVING HOUSE

City's Plan to Remove All Animals to Rose City Speedway Starts Spirited "Discussion" at Park.

Pandemonium reigned among the animals of the city zoo in Washington park when they found that orders were being contemplated that would mean their eviction and moving to a new home in the Rose City speedway.

It all started down in the corner where the China pheasant and native grouse gather for an afternoon of gossip. The message lingering near by heard it and soon the news was scattered around, reaching the press agents in the monkey house.

Such a thing being too good for them to pass unnoticed, the animals were well acquainted and shrewd as to what it was all about and the demand for details was incessant. Down the line of the zoo the news was passed from one to another by the gossipy occupants, even down to the bear pit.

POLAR BEAR STUMPED
Arcturus, he of the polar seas, was left out in the hustle and bustle of carrying the message to everyone and he was all he could do to confine his anxiety to know the reason of the hubbub to the slow and ponderous gait he maintains about the limits of his cage. Some one of the denizens of the zoo, seeing his plight, told him all about the moving day due to arrive during the winter and then old Arcturus was agitated. Frantically tearing about, he cogitated on the ways of man and the peculiarities evinced when brain throbs reach them.

Here he was used to the shady trees round about and getting to be could tolerate the curious people as they gathered outside his cage. Now someone had to go and change it all. He must be put out in the streets during the winter, the task of getting acquainted to do all over again.

In the pit inhabited by the brown and black bears a council of officials was called. The question as to whether peanuts grew out in the speedway and also whether there would be anyone to throw them into the pit was thoroughly discussed. Seated in a deliberative mood, the question was mullied over and over again. The chief of the council would rise from his haunches and give sign of the extreme importance and weight of the matter by stalking about the pit, ignoring all spectators as they tried to entice him to do tricks for a peanut or two. What was the matter? What such momentous questions had to be decided? CAUSE OF IT ALL

The cause of the upheaval in the calm life of the animals was the decision of M. C. Pier, commissioner of parks, to move the zoo from Washington park to the Rose City speedway during the winter and have the new zoo all ready for the kiddies next spring. It was an idea that caused the beasts to wonder just how much the city's affairs would be disturbed by the new order of things. Of course, new houses will be built, except where the ones now in use can be safely moved to the new site; but that only complicates matters, for not only will the inhabitants of the zoo have to acclimate themselves to new surroundings but to new places and corners to make beds in. There is no place like a home that has been a home for many years. Change is always viewed with alarm.

What will be the surroundings at the new home? Will there be shade trees to ward off the rays of the sun, or will it be heartlessly into the already uncomfortable cages? Will the kiddies come out and bring the usual delectable offerings for a trick?

KIDDIES TO BE THERE
According to the plans of Commissioner Pier the kiddies will be there for the paddock of the race track will be converted into a playground and equipped with the latest apparatus. Furthermore, access to the park will be easily attained, for the Rose City park streetcars now run within a few blocks of the site and it is believed the traction company can be prevailed upon to operate the spur line that runs to the very entrance.

The buffalo and elk will be pastured in corrals that will be built in the two north corners of the tract, while the other animals will be housed in cages on the south side of the park, beginning at the southeast corner.

ELK ARE SILENT
The two herds, the elk and buffalo, would not say a thing in regard to the proposed change, though they were chewing their cud a wee bit harder, as though ruminating on the question. Not so with the monkeys. They frankly discussed and cursed the ways and methods of the younger generations on this earth, and the decision was that they were a bunch of upstarts to disturb the peaceful homes of their ancestors. Gyrating all over the cage, they filled the monkey house with bitter things about the genus homo sapiens in general. The younger monkeys were keen for the move, but the old timers failed to show any enthusiasm over the deal.

Cheered by the prospects of new grounds, the coyotes on masses favored the plan and were all for it. Rushing around, they would stop long enough at the entrance of their cage to show their fangs in gleeful demonstration of their approval.

BADGER BUDGELESS
The badger refused to be budged from his complacent attitude toward life in general and by his pompous waddling about gave the idea that anything would be philosophically accepted.

In the meantime the officials at the park bureau were considering ways and means of transporting the animals to their new homes at the least possible expense to the city. That new cages would have to be built for some of the animals was admitted, but the consensus of opinion was that most of them could be moved as they were with the occupants still in them. It is planned to have the new site all ready for the visitors early next spring.

PETTY THEIEVRY IN CITY SCHOOLS PROMPTS INQUIRY

Some Articles Stolen, but in Most Cases Property Is Mis-laid, Declares School Officer.

Many reports that thievery has been increasing rapidly in Portland high schools during the last year have led to an investigation. Students complain that they cannot leave books or other articles in desks without danger of loss.

Some have declared that when they place articles in their private lockers they cannot be sure of having them when they look for them next. "I do not believe that thievery is increasing in the high schools," said Charles A. Rice, assistant superintendent of schools. "There have been some complaints, however, especially from schools where the students have to leave their wraps in the general cloak room. Of course there are a certain number of thefts even where the students have lockers." Benson, Franklin, Lincoln, Jefferson and James-John high schools have lockers, according to Rice. He stated that there are plenty of lockers and that there should be no necessity for students "doubling up," with the added risk of misplaced keys. Commerce, Washington and the Girls Polytechnic, on the other hand, have no lockers. In these schools there is a cloak room opening off each registration room. Usually the cloak rooms have no outside entrance, so that anyone entering them must do so through the registration rooms.

Rice stated that the truant officers, besides watching for children who "play hooky," are continually on the lookout for pilferers. "No added precautions have been taken this year," he stated. "In most cases where students complain of thefts they have simply mislaid their property." In the schools where lockers are provided the students are prohibited from leaving books in the desks, showing that the principals are aware that there are always a few who cannot resist stealing or are so poor they take the only means they have of providing themselves with new school books.

Railway Men Voting In Favor of a Strike

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 17.—Rather than accept an education of 12 1/2 per cent in wages, Spokane railway men are willing to join in a national strike of the railway department of the American Federation of Labor and the "Big Five" brotherhoods of employes in the transportation department, according to returns from the "strike ballots," just taken. The estimates made by railway men on the vote ranged from 3 to 1 to as high as 6 to 1 on the vote taken here. Seven concerts, 12 artists, $7. Elwyn Artist Series. Phone Main 5951.—Adv.

$69,200 Damage Is Result of Flood in Portland in Spring

Damage in Portland amounting to $69,200 was done by the high water of last spring, according to a survey made by O. Laurgaard, city engineer. The damage was caused, he said, by flooding of basements where stock was stored, stoppage of sanitary drainage and the spoiling of roads.

More than 200 firms in the business district of the west side were involved in the damage, the highest being borne by the Northwestern Electric company. Damage amounting to $20,000 was done to the conduits of this company through which steam is furnished to down town buildings. The average loss as revealed by the survey was $500.

As a means of preventing a repetition of such damage A. L. Barbur, commissioner of public works, advocates the building of a reinforced concrete seawall along the waterfront from Madison to Gisan streets. This wall, he pointed out, would prevent back water from entering the basements and saturating the ground west of the harbor line, as was done in the last high water.

Helpful Suggestion to the Thrifty Shoppers Who Would Purchase Seasonable Merchandise

JUST A WORD with the AD MAN

When ever I go down through the store I like to think that some of the good folks who read my advertisements might stop me and say, "Thanks, Mr. Ad Man, for the suggestions you made in today's paper. Those were just the things I wanted most just now and they were just what I wanted them to be."

That is what I try to tell in these, my daily talks with the store's friends and patrons, and I hope if you ever meet me face to face that you will tell me just how well I have told the truth, for my advertisements are all plain truths.
