AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE 800 DOES IT PAY TO BE HONEST! DOES IT PAT TO BE HONEST?
Our observations lead us to believe that honesty can be heavily capitalized and made to pay tinusual profits. As an example, just suppose that there are one hundred men who are all in the market for used cars, ten of them who never kept posted on current events and local conditions, who never read the newron-per advertisements or take the advice of triends, will wander aimleasly around and pick up something from an individual owner or second hand car dealer. The other ninety will come directly to an organization such as will come directly to an organization such as the Covey Motor Car Company Plant and se-lect from their immense stock of rebuilt, re-finished and guaranteed motor cars, an au-tomobile carrying the highest possible value because of its highest possible quality and its because of its highest possible quality and its lowest possible price.

Although we claim that the rebuilding and refinishing of used motor cars as produced by the company has now become an art and cessed to be a trade, it is quite crident that the doping of used cars by irresponsible individuals has developed its artistic side as well. Yes, we feel that it pays to be honest. These ninety satisfied buyers will each produce at least two more purchasers per year and as a result two hundred and seventy cars will have been sold through the honesty of purpose that originally convinced the first ninety. The irresponsible fellow makes a seemingly larger profit on each sale, but a dissatisfied purchaser will keep ten good prospects away from his door. Dissatisfaction travels with the speed and fury of the burricane; complete satisfaction is portrayed in quiet cumulative happiness; it produces the smiles that make those coming in centact with you ask questions.
