DRESS

No. 6273

Quantly Up to Date
A mode distinctly of the late '30s may be made quantly up to date by those subtle touches which are the secret of present-day fashions. For instance, the tight, boned, and rigorously fitted basque of yesterday is now reproduced with quite as picturesque a charm, but, fortunately, without those old-fashioned necessities of feather-boning and steel. The softly fitted silhouette is found to be equally charming, and certainly much more wearable. The full, crinolined skirts of our grandmother's period now rely on the crispness of taffeta or the weight of velvet to distend them rather than on hoops. In the frock illustrated, the long, flowing sleeves may be of chiffon, and the trimming bands of fur.

Edward Thompson to Be Heard in First Playhouse Program

The appearance of the blind dramatic reader, Edward Abner Thompson, Thursday night at the Portland Playhouse (formerly the Little theatre), is being met with enthusiasm by lovers of the best in literature and dramatic interpretation. Thompson's wonderful reading of "Miracle" last year when he appeared in Portland has endeared him to many, and he proved at that time that he is a finished and powerful reader. Thompson's readings, Thursday night will include "The Vision of Sir Launfal," a scene from Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," and a number of miscellaneous readings both humorous and lyric. Tickets may be secured at Melvin A. Frank's, from any member of the Portland Players, or at the Playhouse at Twenty-third and Washington streets.

where they will visit the parents of Mr. Jones. Mrs. Jones is the daughter of Mr. Andrew Todd of Portland.

Music Week to Stress Great Old Songs

A SHEET of music in every pay envelope. If you are not satisfied with your salary, sing a song. Get together with a band of jolly good fellows, who don't like their working conditions, and all join in "America, the Beautiful" or "Home Sweet Home." This is the advice of George Holchkins Street, chairman of the program and music teachers committee for Portland community music week. "That's the big idea—fellowship—unity—giving recreation, aiding business and toil, promoting altruism, understanding, human sympathy," says Street. "Let us sing the old songs. The greatest community sing in the world was held when the Titanic went down—and they did not sing 'Ain't We Got Fun, but 'Nearer My God to Thee.'" The music week committee is still anxious to learn what the people want to sing. The Journal will receive more suggestions as to the scope of music week and the type of songs. Suggestions should be addressed to the music week committee in care of The Journal.

FASHIONS REALM

Paris—The French manufacturer always has a long distance eye on the future and right now that optic is turned toward spring and the materials which will be popular then. The telegraphic reports from Paris have convinced many that the cotton goods will be in special demand and designers already are busy with crepes, organdies, lawns and voiles. Changeable effects are being worked out in weaves of two colors and warp print designs are being used on voile to give soft elusive color effects. The influence of chino probably will be much in evidence and Chinese designs are expected to share with the flower motifs in popularity. A new shade named "Absinth" is achieved by blending green and blue while charming apricot shades are produced with red and yellow.

New York—"It's a duck of a fan," will describe some of these accessories to the toilet better than anything else this year. The beautiful metallic sheen of the plumage of the mallard and teal has been transferred to the tortoise shell sticks of the fans, the green and blue tints being enhanced by a touch of orange at the tips. Pigeon feathers are utilized also on some fans and are dyed brilliant colors to match the gown with which they are carried.
