Superb Comedy Skit And Tramp Funster Hippodrome Features

In days of old when bandits were bold they used to go out and snare a thoroughbred as a means of transportation. Nowadays they capture a Rolls, a Pierce or a Cadillac. That was, at least the inference of those who attended the Hippodrome Thursday and saw a great big, snaky car gide onto the stage as one of the actors in 17th. the stage as one of the actors in "The Lincoln Highwayman." a superb comedy aketch presented by George Palmer Moore and Florence Elliott as the head-line feature of the weekend bill at that playhouse. ble pair of performers.

There are two acts on the present bill which have been seen here in the past, and both of them have made good impressions. One of them is the hobomonologist, will J. Evans, who has an entirely new line of chatter on timely topics and otherwise, and the other is Christopher and Walton in their "Close Shave," which delineates the troubles of an Italian barber whose monopoly is menaced by a lady barber.

The Tiller sisters are the decorative feature of the bill. The giris, who are nice to look at and wear good clothes, have a line of comedy jingles and chatter that is pleasing. A cycling novelty presented by Time and Ward rounds out this very satisfactory bill. The picture feature is a fine western drama, "Red Courage," which gives Hoot Gibson another chance to display his abilities as a range rider.

New Silhouette for Autumn

In abrupt reaction from the past mode which sanctioned unbroken chemise lines and an extremely short snug sleeve is the new silhouette for Autumn

In abrupt reaction from the past mode which sanctioned unbroken chemise lines and an extremely short snug sleeve is the new silhouette for autumn and early winter, a charming example of which is shown here. The oval neck-line and wide, flowing sleeves are echoes of the mediaval period, which is influencing many of the newest fashiona. In perfect harmony with these gracious lines are the soft folds of the unusually draped overtunic and long, paneled blouse. The slashed tunic, by the way, in spite of its appearance of intricacy, is no more than a series of slashed lengths of Canton creps, folded to form the exaggerated loops which fall on each hip and at the front. This type of frock is an unusually good one for combining different fabrics or colors.

By Lintes Bayles

A LITTLE maid, with a Yang-tse ach cent and a San Francisco wink dispels the woes of the world in "East Is West," the absorbing play which came to the Heilig Thursday night.

Playgoers all over the world who have never seen "East Is West" know a little about it, as they do of every play that has had a straight run of nearly three years. The story is of Ming Toy, introduced to the audience as her father sells her on a "love-boat," or girl-market on the Yang-tse. She is about to become the property of a fanged connoisseur when an American lad. Billy Benson, stays the sacrilege by persuading his friends, Le Sang Lee, a San Francisco merchant, to take the girl to America with him.

In San Francisco Ming Toy finds a world of delight waiting for her. In the house of Le Sang Kee she is content, dreaming dreams in which Ming Toy finds happiness with Benson.

Then rears the racial barrier that comes between Ming Toy and the sun. In the succeeding passages the tragedy
