

ARMS DELEGATES WANTED ON COAST; MAYOR GIVES PLEA

In an effort to have the foreign delegates to the conference on the limitation of armaments visit the West coast, Mayor George L. Baker wired the governors of all Western states and the mayor and chambers of commerce of the leading cities on the coast Tuesday night to ask their congressional representatives to support the resolution presented by Senator Stanford authorizing a tour at the expense of the federal government.

The resolution was presented to the senate and stated that the value of the tour would be great as the delegates would be able to obtain first hand information as to conditions and sentiment of the Western states as well as those of the East. In his wire to the various state and municipal officials Mayor Baker pointed out that the opportunity to entertain foreign officials and show them the resources of the West was the greatest in history and should be taken advantage of.

ACTION ON LICENSE FEES AWAITS PUBLIC HEARING
The proposed revision of license fees for business concerns operating in Portland will not be voted on by the council until those affected can express their opinions at a public hearing. The date for the hearing has not yet been set. Meanwhile the revision ordinance was referred to S. C. Pier, commissioner of finance.

"The revision will bring some $25,000 or $25,000 to the city as additional revenue," Pier stated, "and so far as I can see it is fair, all around. It is not in any way to be considered as an occupation tax for it is purely regulatory. The revision now made out is about 25 per cent lower than the license charged in other cities of the Pacific coast."

Among the lines concerned are railway advertisers, bill posters, cleaning establishments, second hand dealers, rooming houses, tobacco dealers and others.

HARD SURFACE URGED FOR EAST EMERSON STREET
Signed by Paul V. French and five others, a petition was filed in the office of the city auditor Tuesday afternoon requesting that East Emerson street from Thirtieth to Thirty-first street be paved with a satisfactory hard surface.

Joseph F. Stephens also filed a petition for permission to erect a peanut and popcorn stand at 122 Killingsworth avenue.

LICENSE HEARING SET
Date for the hearing of the license revocation cases against U. Iwata and F. M. Shimizu was set for November 9 at 2 p. m. by the city council this morning. Both men operate hotels, one at 24 1/2 North Fourth street, and the other at 230 1/2 Burnside street.

11 CASES DIPHTHERIA

Reductions in Fir Lumber Rates East, Association's Plan

Reductions ranging from 2 to 15 per cent in rates on fir lumber moving from the Northwest to Eastern territory have been proposed by the Central Freight Association lines, according to advice received by the freight department of the O-W. R. & N. today. The O-W. officials feel sure that the rates will be approved by the interstate commerce commission.

The new rates proposed are New York and New England territory, 90 cents as against the present rate of $1.06 1/4; to Cincinnati and Detroit territory, 85 cents as against present rate of $1.14 cents; and Pittsburg and Buffalo territory, 83 1/2 cents as against 94 cents. The rates from Spokane, Montana and Eastern Oregon territory will be 2 cents under the coast rates. The usual higher differential of shingles will be readjusted.

SEATTLE'S MAYOR HEARTILY BEHIND BIG PORTLAND FAIR

Greetings and best wishes for the success of the 1925 exposition were received by Mayor Baker today from Hugh M. Caldwell, mayor of Seattle. He telegraphed Mayor Baker as follows:

"Seattle is much interested in the proposed world's exposition in 1925. Seattle has endorsed the project because it believes it will have a wonderful influence in building up the Northwest in which we are all interested. We plan to urge conventions to meet that year in the Northwest offering as an unusual attraction the world's exposition in Portland. We sincerely hope that the people of Portland and Oregon will by overwhelming vote decide to proceed with this movement. Seattle wishes you success."

Site boosters met at luncheon today with Phil Meschan chairman of the committee, and plans were laid for campaigning for the tax measure during the remainder of the campaign. However much the site boosters differ as to the location of the exposition, they proved a unit on boosting for the big fair. Each organization committee will work hard to get out a full vote in the various districts. The women's auxiliary committee, Mrs. Charles E. Runyon, chairman, met yesterday and arranged details for the club women's luncheon Saturday, November 12, when short talks will be given supporting the exposition project. This function promises to be largely attended.

Spectacular Fire on Portland Heights Is Speedily Quenched

Within 10 minutes after the arrival at the scene of a fire in an old vacant house owned by C. E. Bailey, just off Broadway terrace on top of Portland Heights, firemen had streams of water playing on the flames in spite of the difficulty in laying hose up the hill from the nearest plug some distance away. Damage was estimated at $500. From its position on the peak of the hill, the burning house could be seen like a beacon light and attracted attention all over the city. The fire had apparently been going for some time before the alarm was turned in.

CLEVELAND MILK STRIKE SERIOUS

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 2.—(L. N. S.)—More than 75 per cent of the people of greater Cleveland are without milk this morning when drivers for the Telling-Belle Vernon company and the Cloverdale Dairy company went on strike against a proposed wage reduction of 20 per cent.

The men offered to accept a wage reduction of $3 per week instead of the $8.50 weekly asked by their employers, but this was refused.

Hospitals and families with babies will be supplied with milk, union officials said this morning.

Smith of Portland, Or., is here in connection with his Alaskan Mail contract, which the second assistant postmaster general has announced as cancelled from November 1. Chapman Returns From Conference At San Francisco

C. S. Chapman of the Western Forestry and Conservation association has returned from San Francisco, where he attended a meeting between representatives of the forest service, the bureau of entomology and private timber owners to discuss methods of cooperation to control the insect depredations in the yellow pine stands in Southern Oregon and California, in the event of the passage of legislation in congress to provide funds for government action. Private owners have already agreed to go ahead at the same time the government does, for the cleaning up of their areas. All the work has to be done at once, if it is to be effective.

Should funds be available work will be started early in the spring. The method used will be the felling and stripping of infected trees and the burning of their bark, which is the part attractive to beetles.

A. J. Jaenicke, insect specialist for the forest service, has been studying the beetle situation in the Klamath lake country for several months, and Dr. John Boyce, forest pathologist, will leave Sunday to look over the trees that have been felled and posted.

Federal Prisoner Fails to Keep Word

Lorenzo Dole of Heceta, Or., failed to keep his word Tuesday with the federal court. Dole promised to surrender himself November 1 to the United States marshal and serve his four months sentence in the county jail for setting fires in the national forests near his home. Early this afternoon he had still failed to put in an appearance. Dole was allowed his liberty for a few weeks after he was convicted in order that he might arrange his business affairs.

GLICKMAN CAN'T SELL THE GOODS — SO IT'S UP TO ME

—Mr. Glickman went to New York several weeks ago to buy merchandise. When he started to buy he thought he was the biggest merchant in the United States, for when he got home he found that he had a bunch of goods on hand which he bought on his credit. Well, the bills started to come in and he found that he did not have enough money to pay for them, so he put on a sale, but didn't sell enough to anywhere near pay his bills; so he wired me to come and help him. I wired back that there was only one condition on which I would come to Portland, and that was that I COULD SELL THE MERCHANDISE AT ANY PRICES I SAW FIT TO MOVE THEM. So I'm on the job—WATCH MY SMOKE.

SAVAGE CORD

THE ORIGIN OF THE STARS
BY "INDIAN" MILLER

The coyote is unhappy. Though he sees the whole world he is unhappy. His trails take him through wonderful places; for they are scenic trails. No living man ever had the good fortune to see the hundredth part of the splendid scenes he has seen. His trail passes among mountains and forests; and along the pleasant streams. He travels so close to the ground that he sees many things the human eye does not observe. The flower is a familiar sight to him. Every locality is a miniature world to him. He watches the ants running, each on its separate errand, and flings them from his feet. He goes close to the ground and detects all the wonderful odors from the flowers and the growing plants.

His feet are good. They carry him where no moccasin could ever go. But Coyote enjoys little of his life; the things he sees mean little to him, for he always has a toothache. It is true. In the old days when the sky was still black, Coyote was happy, though he could see but little at night. One day Old Man sent him on an important errand. He said, "Take this sack to Old Woman; and don't you dare open it." Coyote promised not to open the sack; and he started on the long journey to the home of Old Woman. Finally he began to wonder what was in the sack, but he remembered his promise. Finally he became hungry, and then he wondered if there might be something to eat in it. The temptation became very great. He thought, "I will only look into the sack; that could do no harm."

So he untied the neck of the sack and peeped in. Out popped a little star; and as it fluttered around him like a butterfly he tried to catch it and put it back into the sack. Then, when he dropped the sack to catch that one, all the others came out and fluttered around Coyote in a swarm; and before he could catch any of them they all were flying too high for him to reach.

When Old Man saw the stars in the sky he knew that Coyote had disobeyed him. But Old Man could not catch Coyote, for his feet were too good. So at last Old Man was satisfied to inflict an everlasting toothache on Coyote, so that it became hereditary; and this is the reason that Coyote howls at the stars at night and is afraid of man.

He travels far for his feet are good. Motorists find Savage Cord tires, like Coyote's feet, are good on the long, bad trails. And the cost is low for the service they give, for Savage Tires are Built to Excel, it is true.
