Jascha Heifetz
Plays for Big Audience

By J. L. Wallis
JASCHA HEIFETZ, youthful and world famous violinist, played at the Heilig Wednesday night and disappointed a great many of the capacity audience, for, while the technique was perfect, as always, he apparently failed to put soul into his art. His attitude was that of performing a duty because of having entered into a contract to do so.

The concert was the opening event of the Steers & Coman series, and so large was the number turned away that a return engagement is announced for next Wednesday night, also at the Heilig.

The program of Wednesday night consisted of Beethoven's sonata No. 8, G major, Bruch's well known concerto, a group of lighter numbers and Sarasate's Introduction and Tarentelle. The Beethoven sonata was superbly played both by the violinist and his accompanist, Samuel Chotshoff, and it was roundly applauded. Then followed the Bruch concerto, and in its beautiful theme of the adagio movement Heifetz took the first opportunity to draw out that beautiful tone with which he completely captured Portland at his first concert here a year or so ago.

Throughout the program Heifetz demonstrated perfect intonation, faultless left hand finger technique, a remarkable facility and fine sense of shading, yet he did not instill that inspiring influence that causes audiences to rise out of their seats and applaud wildly. It was an academic rather than a romantic presentation.

The number that came nearest touching the heartstrings was the Kreisler transcription of Dvorak's Slavonic dance, the only number in which Heifetz played double stops, and the audience was in a mood to have it repeated. Heifetz, however, granted only two extra numbers, "The Prophet Bird," by Schumann, exquisitely played with muted strings and harp effect, and "La Chasse," a brilliant Kreisler composition.

Conspicuous by their absence were the sustained singing passages, occasional introduction of harmonies and thrilling cadences of violin playing that the average concert attendant expects when patronizing a violinist, who, by not a few, is regarded as the first of those before the public.

The beginning of the concert was delayed about 20 minutes by the din outside incident to the 1925 exposition parade, and the late arrival of many who had been held up by the traffic jam.

FRATERNAL

Portland lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, Wednesday evening received a class of 300 new members with a large attendance of old members. J. W. Fitzgeraid, dictator, presided over the meeting until the class was marched in. Among the speakers were A. G. Rushlight, ex-mayor of Portland; Judge George Tazewell, Past Dictator; Judge G. W. Morrow, Past Dictator Oscar Horn.

During the initiation Past Dictator Roscoe P. Hurst presided, assisted by Arthur W. Jones, vice dictator; Allan R. Joy, dictatorial; W. A. Carter, prelate. The degree team of 24, in its new uniform of white, was commanded by W. C. H. Smith. Fred A. Seiberling led the Moose band of 42 pieces, which came in after the 1925 exposition celebration on the streets and played stirring patriotic airs. After the initiation ceremonies a midnight lunch was served in the club rooms.

Waverly Social Society club is making great preparations for its bazaar to be held Saturday afternoon and evening, November 19, at the Masonic hall, East Twenty-sixth and Clinton street. There will be a chicken dinner served from 5 to 8 p. m. Mrs. M. A. McIntyre, president of the club, is assisted by a committee consisting of Marion Phillips, Mary Dunagan, Ellen Zrick, Clara Hawley, Elsie Alger, Sarah Thompson. A cordial invitation is extended to members of the Order Eastern Star, the Masons and their friends to make the affair a success.

Multnomah camp, Woodmen of the World, has 350 turkeys waiting claimants and will probably have 450 by next week in time for Thanksgiving. Every member obtaining the application of one new member and "seeing him through the settlement" will receive one Oregon made turkey. Multnomah camp only needs about 3500 more applications to have 10,000 members. Friday night at 112 East Sixth street it is expecting to block the desk of Clerk J. O. Wilson with application cards.

Kiwanis council, Degree of Pockhontas, will have a card party at Alisky hall Friday evening to which all are invited.

State Accident
Relief Given
Hundreds

By Vella Winner
THE splendid constructive work being done by the Oregon state accident commission was detailed in an illuminating manner by Will T. Kirk, a member of the commission at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Oregon Social Workers' association held Wednesday in the Oregon grill, Dr. Philip A. Parsons presiding.

There are in Oregon at all times 500 temporarily disabled men. There are 215 fatal award cases in which widows, children or dependent parents are drawing compensation; there are 102 such cases in other states and 27 in foreign countries. There are beneficiaries in every county in the state except Wheeler, in 25 other states and 15 in foreign countries. The commission is doing a big constructive work, conducting two departments for reconstruction where occupational therapy is offered the men by competent teachers and men are trained to take new work in case their accidents have rendered them unable to resume their old occupations. Fifty-four men are taking vocational training under the commission now.

Oregon has the enviable reputation, according to government reports, of paying her compensations more promptly than any other state in the Union or than any private insurance company.

Judge Jacob Kessler of the court of domestic relations will be the speaker at the next meeting of the association, when he will present some phases of the social problems growing out of the recent Benson Polytechnic trouble. Mrs. Sallie Orr-Dunbar, chairman of the membership committee, reported that letters had been sent to the executive heads of the social agencies and organizations together with membership blanks urging them to solicit memberships among their members.

The second annual conference of the National League of Women Voters of Oregon will be held at Central library Friday and Saturday.

Base, state president, presiding. Many out of town visitors will be in the city for the session. The morning sessions will be devoted to reports and business, and the afternoon will be given over to addresses and matters of national moment.

The program outlined for the conference follows:

Friday Morning
Executive board meeting.
President's greetings; fraternal greetings; business.

Conference luncheon; round-table discussion of 1925 fair.

Afternoon
Reports from the national convention. Address, Mrs. Winfield R. Smith, national representative.

Saturday Morning
Reports of standing committees.
Conference luncheon, "Civic Problems."

Afternoon
Reports; unfinished business; finance. Address, "Women as Jurors," Judge J. P. Kavanaugh.
Resolutions; adjournment.

A bazaar will be given at the Waverly Heights Congregational church at Thirty-third street and Woodward avenue, Friday afternoon and evening. This is an annual affair given by the Ladies Aid society. Fancy articles and towels, handkerchiefs and pillowcases, suitable for Christmas gifts, will be on sale. Refreshments will be served and programs will be given afternoon and evening.

The Overlook Woman's Improvement club will meet Friday afternoon at 2:30 with Mrs. R. M. Morvillius, 825 Overlook boulevard. Mrs. H. O. Cartozian will speak on "Life and Customs of the Armenians" and Zabelle Papazian dressed in native costume, will sing. In a recent meeting of the club, J. E. Grakle heartily endorsed the 1925 exposition.

Willard W. C. T. U. will hold a praise and Thanksgiving service Friday at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. J. R. Groten, 1018 Fairfield avenue. Miss Florence Polien will have charge of the service. An interesting program has been prepared.

An alumnae reunion of Eliot school will be held Friday night at 8 o'clock in the assembly hall of the school. All members are urged to attend as an enjoyable evening is promised. Refreshments will be served.

Beach Parent-Teacher association is sponsoring an entertainment to be presented by Grace Thomas Bloxham at the Oakley Green school Friday evening at 8 p. m. The proceeds will go to pay for a Victrola for the beach school.

The Woman's Single Tax club will meet Friday at 2 p. m. at 318 Stock Exchange bldg., corner Third and Yam-

DRESS

Wide Sleeves and the bateau Neck-Line Distinguish the Winter Afternoon Frocks.

A particularly smart type of street frock is made almost entirely of fur, or is effectively combined with silk duvetine, velours, broadcloth, or even Canton crepe. The frock illustrated at the left makes its slightly circular skirt, which extends from the hip, of kimmer cloth; while the long-waisted blouse is of navy blue duvetine, banded with fine braid and stripes of fur. A cut steel girdle makes the low waist line. The sleeves and neck-line are characteristically of the winter season. The frock at the right also has the favored neck-line and wide sleeves, emphasized in this case by the fringe of monkey fur which also outlines the unique skirt. This combination of apron tunic and hip panels achieves the elongated hem-line in a new way. Two waist-lines distinguish this frock and suggest many interesting color combinations for development in the new wood medallions, strung on chenille to form a girdle.

Historic Bell Used
By Vancouverites
As Parade Feature

Vancouver, Wash., Nov. 17.—The old historic bell, brought around Cape Horn by the Hudson Bay company and used to call worshippers to the fur company's chapel, was one of the noise producing agents used by Vancouver boosters in the Portland parade Wednesday night.

The bell was acquired by the city in 1885 and placed in a tower at Eighth and Washington streets, where it served until about a year ago to summon volunteer firemen to fires and to sound the curfew warning children off the streets. The bell weighs one ton, and at the time the city gained possession of it, L. M. Hadden was councilman at large and opposed placing it in the tower, asserting that the structure was not substantial enough to stand the strain of the swinging bell. He was overruled, and the bell served the purpose for 35 years, when the tower came a menace and was torn down, an electric siren being installed as a fire signal.

The Woman's Single Tax club will meet Friday at 2 p. m. at 318 Stock Exchange bldg., corner Third and Yam-

Peoples Double
Bill Pleases
Reviewer

By A. S. J.
A DOUBLE bill of unusual merit is presented at the Peoples theatre this week, in which Elaine Hammerstein gets enough hard luck to last a lifetime in "Handcuffs and Kisses," and Max Linder furnishes a wealth of rejuvenating mirth in his latest comedy, "Seven Years' Hard Luck."

It's best to time one's arrival for the entrance of Elaine as Lois Walton in the purposeful drama and leave with the happier inspiration of Linder's refreshingly breezy comedy.

Lois is an orphan, endowed with a poverty which excites the contempt of a cold-blooded aunt, and a comeliness which breeds jealous hatred in the heart of a designing cousin, Violet Walton. Falsely accused by her cousin, Lois is sentenced to a reformatory for incorrigible girls, and is there subjected to all sorts of humiliation and mental torture.

Following an exciting riot of the inmates and subsequent investigation of the reformatory, Lois is paroled to a physician whose proposals of illicit love force her to flee for protection to the home of a lawyer who has assisted in the investigation. Accepting a job as social secretary for a Miss Dell, Lois soon discovers that her employer is proprietor of a questionable resort.

One of the habits of the place wants to marry Lois and she is given the alternative of accepting him or returning to the reformatory. Lois does neither, but marries her employer, and the lawyer friend, secures her pardon from the governor of the state and marries her himself. After so many tears and harrowing experiences it is to be hoped that the pair live happily forever and ever.
