Wills Whips Denver Ed in One Wallop

THE pugilistic graveyard refused to give up its dead last night, and today Denver Ed Martin, elderly son of Ham, is still in his tomb with Harry Wills firmly sitting on the headstone and showing an utter disregard for the ghost of a bygone boxer.

Denver faded out in the first round after one of the most pitiable and miserable exhibitions ever staged in a ring. The conquered giant was knocked down six times before Referee Tom Loutit put an end to the fiasco by raising Wills' hand. Denver wasn't completely out, but he was weaving and wallowing around the ring like a man just emerg-ing from a dose of ether. CHOP DOES WORK

The official timekeeper said the bout lasted two minutes and five seconds but it was virtually over three seconds after the belt. Wills clipped Denver back of the left ear with a right chop as they came together. They clinched and when Wills shoved Denver away, the latter fell to the floor like a sack of wet dough. He took a count of eight or nine and when he got up he was sent down with a similar blow to the same spot. This was repeated for four more knockdowns and the "fight of a century" was over.

Martin offered no more resistance than would a chronic invalid. Some one said he caught Wills, after the third knockdown, with his famous left hook to the stomach, but if he did, it had no apparent effect other than to make Wills smile. All of Denver's alleged knowledge and experience in the ring was smothered by the aggressiveness of the young

DENVER TURNS "TAIL"

Denver acted more like a rank amateur than a seasoned boxer. His efforts made him appear ridiculous. At one time he dived almost through Wills' legs in trying to get to cover. At another time he turned tail and, with head down and arms and gloves sheltering, ran directly from Wills, only to be brought to a halt in a heutral corner and dropped by short, chopping blows. There was not what one might call a clean blow throughout the brief encounter. It is doubtful if Martin regained full consciousness once after that first smash connected with

The fight did nothing to give one a glimpse into how much class Wills may possess or how near he is to being a match for Jack Dempsey. It emphasized only one thing and that is, that the coast beavyweights Martin has been defeating so easily are nought but ring

All in all, this affair was a tremendous disappointment to one of the biggest crowds that the Milwaukle boxing commission has ever played to. ADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Nov. 19 .- A ringside jury of boxing commissioners and judges gave Johnny Dundee the new junior lightweighht fighting title and the diamondstudded belt of the class in the fifth round of the Dundee-George Chancy fight here Friday night.

Chancy hit Dundee low, and examination proved Dundee's claim of foul, though he apparently was not much hurt. Chancy had hit three low blows before that one, however, and seemed bound to lose one way or another. Dundee had won all the way, pasting Chaney with Chaney, a southpaw, with a heavy left, crashed it to Johnny's jaw twice in the third round and wobbled him slightly, but he was hopelessly slow and seemed out of condition. ## By Tad Ted Lewis Is Anxious to Box Georges

JEW YORK, Nov. 19 .- Ted (Kid) Lewis, the audacious old duffer, now holds the British welter, middle and light-heavyweight titles, and is making fresh cracks from the gallery at Georges Carpentier, hoping to get a whack at the world's light-heavyweight championship before the Frenchman has a chance to meet Tom Gibbons in New York. When Lewis was good, he had steady work in America. The barn-storming team of Ted Lewis and Jack Britten in a refined act, entitled "Me and You," played more engagements than the two famous Sams-McVey and Langfordand their act went bigger, because always one or the other held the title. Last winter, however, after a severe liness had hauled him down the road, Ted made a bad show against Britton in a decision fight at the Garden here and the act broke up for keeps, Britton retaining the title.

KICK WAS GONE

Lewis was all through in the big time, and he showed it plainly in that fight. His kick was gone, and he boxed awful. Now, however, Lewis has taken three titles in the land of his origin, and although he is still no bigger than a heavy welter, the cables from London tell of his looking for trouble with Joe Beckett, the British heavyweight champion, famed as a distance plunger, in case Carpentier won't play with him.

Lewis began boxing over on the east end side of Blackfriar's bridge at a stadium called "The Ring" and bumped off the feathers of his time to win the British featherweight title before coming "out to the states." He is well known in London, particularly to the people who correspond to the "east siders" of New York, and it is reported that old friends. from the neighborhood of "The Ring" ometimes touch him up for sizeable donations to finance their mixed als par-ties, usually after Ted has taken a nice piece of money for a fight.
