

BRIEF DEFENDING STATE BONUS LAW IS FILED IN COURT

Attorney General Contents Act Passed by People Is Valid, and Machinery Is Provided.

Salem, Nov. 19.—The governor of the state having proclaimed the bonus amendment to the state constitution as duly adopted by vote of the people, the courts are consequently excluded from exercising any jurisdiction over the matter, according to Attorney General Van Winkle.

This stand is taken in his respondent's brief, filed in the test case in the supreme court attacking the constitutionality of the bonus act. The case, a friendly action brought to secure a court interpretation of the constitutionality of the bonus act in order to satisfy bond buyers as to the validity of the bonds to be sold under the act, was brought by Thomas Henry Boyd, commander of Portland post, American Legion, against Governor Olcott and the other members of the World War veterans' state aid commission.

Argument of the case before the supreme court has been set for Tuesday afternoon and prompt action on an opinion has been promised by the court in order to expedite the sale of bonds under the act. This sale, set for November 30, it has been stated by Captain Harry Brumbaugh, secretary of the bonus commission, must be postponed. It has been indicated that the sale would probably be set for December 20.

In his brief, credit for which is shared with Willis S. Moore, his first assistant, the attorney general lays stress upon the fact that the amendment under attack was written into the constitution by vote of the people themselves and that this amendment not only provides for a tax levy for bond purposes, but also includes a large portion of the house bill creating the machinery for the administration of the act, the bill itself having previously been regularly enacted into law by the state legislature.

MUD PREVENTS BOTH TEAMS FROM SCORING

aggregations, but ground gaining was simply impossible on account of the slippery field.

The heavy field, which was expected to give the Aggies an advantage, worked against them, as they fumbled more frequently than Oregon and Kasberger and McKenna had considerable difficulty in handling Leslie's punts. While Chapman, probably under orders, did not attempt to catch many.

Oregon had a wonderful opportunity in the final quarter. Leslie was gaining from 5 to 10 yards on every exchange of kicks, but the punting game was brought into play a trifle too late to bring any great results. The wind favored Oregon and the stars of bygone years were yelling for punts on the first down.

The Aggies looked slow compared to the Oregon backfield, probably due more or less to the style of play. The Beaver seemed unable to get any footing, while the Oregon backs, especially King and Johnson, got away several times for fairly good gains.

Had the field been dry, there would have been a different story to tell, as the Lemon-Yellow boys were sure puffed up for a battle and they fought a hard one as it was against superior weight and experience.

PLAY IS CLEAN

The game was clean throughout. There was no rough piling up or battling between the players, yet each team tried for a victory. The Oregon team went through the whole game without a substitution, while Coach Rutherford put in three fresh players in the final part of the game in hope of victory, but these players met with the same handicaps as did the others.

The Aggies kicked off, but it was soon determined that not much was to be gained by rushing the ball, and after a place kick from the 44-yard line. It was a failure and Miller punted out to the 45-yard line.

Oregon failed to gain at scrimmage and then attempted a forward pass which Miller intercepted and gained 20 yards before being downed on the Oregon yard line.

AGGIES TRY TO RUSH

The Aggies tried to rush the ball, but failed. Crowell attempted a place kick from the 42 yard line. Like Leslie's kick, this one was a failure and Miller punted out to the 45-yard line.

Oregon failed to gain at scrimmage and then attempted a forward pass which Miller intercepted and gained 20 yards before being downed on the Oregon yard line.

FUMBLE BLOCKS WAY

Early in the second quarter, after an exchange of punts, the Aggies had their opportunity after making their lone first down by rushing, but Kasberger's fumble blocked the way. Crowell made two attempts to make a placement kick before the second quarter was very old, but both were dismal attempts.

After the second place kick failed, Leslie recovered a blocked punt on O. A. C.'s 31 yard line. Latham, who loomed up above the heads of the other Oregon players, snatched a forward pass out of the air. He had a clear field, but the heavy mud and the Aggie backs forced him out of bounds on the 16 yard line.

Then Oregon failed when King fumbled. Kicking was resorted to again and Oregon started an offensive which netted yardage twice, King gaining 11 yards on an end run just as the half ended.

The players came back on the field with dry equipment, but in a few downs they were smeared with mud from head to foot. It was almost impossible to distinguish them.

PLAY IN MIDDLEFIELD

Playing in the third quarter was in middlefield mostly. It seemed impossible for the teams to get started on their offensive. Oregon, however, made two first downs from scrimmage with King and Chapman carrying the ball.

In the middle of the third period, the Aggies shifted their backfield, but the change did not add any strength. McKenna, who went to the quarterback position when Kasberger dropped back to half, completed a pass for five yards and on the following down Gill missed a beautiful chance for a 15 yard gain by allowing the ball to slip through his hands. After this play, Crowell made his fourth effort to make a place kick, but it fell 10 yards short and Chapman ran the ball back to the 25 yard line. The quarter ended with the Aggies in possession of the ball in middlefield. Oregon made a mistake in attempting to scrimmage in the fourth period with the wind in its favor and only by recovering fumbles were they able to make much headway.

"BEECLOTH" PLAY FAILS

McKenna completed a pass for 10 yards and brought the ball into Oregon's territory and then the Idaho "beecloth" play was brought into the game, but it fizzled. Oregon smeared an attempted aerial attack from this formation and downed Kasberger on the next pass play before he could get the ball away from him.

This was practically the last scrimmage of the game, for during the remaining minutes the ball sailed back and forth in the air with Oregon having a decided advantage. Chapman played fairly Aggie punts safely. While McKenna attempted to run them back, he fumbled several of them.

It appeared as if the coaches were making a play for a break in the luck by resorting to kicking on the first down, but the players were not taking any too many chances at fumbling.

Oregon gained 136 yards from scrimmage against 38 for the Aggies. Oregon completed one pass for 15 yards while the Aggies made two for a gain of 15 yards.

PUNTS ARE POOR

Despite the poor punts during the middle of the game, the averages were fairly good. Leslie's mark being 34 yards on 15 kicks and Miller and Gill averaging 31 on 18 punts.

The result of the game was announced as being 12-500. The spirit of the fans and the rooters was kept up to the final moment of the game.

The mud was so thick that an abundance of towels was doled out to the players to be used to wipe out their mud-filled eyes. A crowd of players retained the towels and fastened them on their belts and made frequent use of them during the play.

The result of the game was no great surprise. A fight was promised and a fight it was. There was some fierce tackling. Oregon at several times had great interference on end runs, but some Aggie would break up the combination by skidding into the interference.

Table listing players and statistics for Oregon and Aggies, including names like O. A. C., McKenna, Crowell, etc.

Campus at Pacific Is Cleaned by Students

Pacific University, Forest Grove, Nov. 19.—In spite of threatening mists, the whole student body turned out Friday to clean the campus of fallen oak leaves.

Classes were excused to enable everyone to participate in the annual clean-up day. Costumes of all kinds were in vogue. In the interests of the homecoming Thanksgiving game with Chemawa, the whole student body paraded the streets of the town, headed by the college band. A hard times dance in the gymnasium concluded the festivities.

FEW TURKEYS ARE SOLD IN ROSEBURG; PRICE 41 1/2 CENTS

Farm Bureau Exchange Pool Lets 1000 Birds Go to Seattle Buyers Late in Afternoon.

Roseburg, Nov. 19.—About 1000 turkeys were sold in Roseburg late today at a price of 41 1/2 cents. Very few growers brought their turkeys in, however, and receipts were light. It is estimated here today that the annual turkey crop is 50 per cent below normal.

Local buyers, of whom George Kohl-hagen, of the Roseburg Poultry Company, are the most prominent, bought steadily all day at 40 and 41 1/2 cents, opening the market at that price this morning.

Buyers for outside concerns were finally forced to take that mark, after offering 35 cents.

The pool has still received the largest number of birds. Half of the birds from Roseburg went to the pool, two thirds at Oakland, and virtually all of the birds from the Yoncalla, Yoncalla, Drain and Elkton.

HIGHER PRICE ADVOCATED

The largest shipment of birds will go from Oakland and Roseburg. Oakland is the principal shipping point in the county, but few birds have been bought there this year, the majority going to the pool. Only two dozen birds were sold at Yoncalla.

Interest centered in the farm bureau exchange pool. Although it was announced that birds would be received Friday night, banning of the exchange refused to accept offers made by outside buyers at that time. As a result no bids were received until late this afternoon.

SEATTLE TAKES POOL

The wholesale price on dressed birds here this year is from 7 to 8 cents less than last year, and the retail price is about 10 cents lower. The demand for birds, which up to this afternoon was weak, is rapidly gaining strength and is expected to reach a peak in the county at a good price is assured.

The turkey pool, comprising about 75 per cent of all birds raised in the county, this year was bought late this afternoon by the Jim Henry company of Seattle and one other brokerage concern of the Sound city. The cash price paid was 41 1/2 cents.

SPOKANE TURKEY MARKET IS TENDING DOWNWARD

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 19.—The wholesale price of good turkeys varies from 43 to 48 cents, according to quality. The wholesalers say that the retail price of good Thanksgiving turkeys should be from 50 to 55 cents, and that at present the price is not tending upward.

Shipments into Spokane are coming from Montana and Inland Empire points. The local prices are expected to be a shade lower by Thanksgiving day. Dressed birds are plentiful. No reports have been made of any shipments out of Spokane. The state of the market tends downward.

LOWER TURKEY PRICE AT BOISE IS ANTICIPATED

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 19.—Wholesale prices for dressed turkeys range from 30 to 35 cents. Many were contracted for early at 33 to 35 cents for the local trade. At the close of the week they were down to 30 cents bid. Live turkeys are quoted at 25 to 28 cents. The prevailing price for dressed turkeys in Boise is 40 cents, with indications that they will go lower rather than higher. These prices are virtually 10 cents under the prevailing prices a year ago. Dressed turkeys a year ago were bought wholesale at 40 to 45 cents and sold retail at 50 cents in Boise stores.

There is an abundance of turkeys in the territory surrounding Boise, more than in a number of years past. Shipments are still being made to Portland but much smaller than the shipments made earlier in the season. Good shipments went out of this territory for the Alaska trade. No turkeys are shipped East from this section.

TURKEYS RETAIL FOR 45 CENTS AT WALLA WALLA

Walla Walla, Wash., Nov. 19.—Turkeys were retailing from Walla Walla markets tonight at 45 cents per pound dressed for the local trade.

Local prices are expected to be a shade lower by Thanksgiving day. Dressed birds are plentiful. No reports have been made of any shipments out of Spokane. The state of the market tends downward.

Local prices are expected to be a shade lower by Thanksgiving day. Dressed birds are plentiful. No reports have been made of any shipments out of Spokane. The state of the market tends downward.

CORVALLIS MARKET UNSTEADY

Corvallis, Nov. 19.—The wholesale price of turkeys is unsteady. The market is expected to be a shade lower by Thanksgiving day. Dressed birds are plentiful. No reports have been made of any shipments out of Spokane. The state of the market tends downward.
