

JAPANESE THINKING IN PAST, ON CHINA, DECLARES BRYAN

By William Jennings Bryan (Copyright, 1921, by United Press) Washington, Nov. 21.—The Chinese question is becoming more and more a factor in the conference and it is quite certain that some steps will be taken toward the harmonizing of positions of the two important factors.

In attempting to establish zone influence, to secure concessions and to influence the selection of advisers, Japan is only doing what other nations have done. Her mistake is in continuing methods which the world has outgrown.

Japan may not have given sufficient consideration to three factors that have a controlling influence on the situation.

First, China is not what she was a generation ago. She is a republic, and her intellectual awakening, though later, is scarcely less surprising than that which brought Japan into prominence as one of the great nations.

Second, the world's attitude today is different from what it was 25 years ago, or even 10 years ago. Germany, the most autocratic government in Europe, has become a republic, and Austria, scarcely less autocratic than Germany, has recently elected a king who tried to resume the throne.

Third, the reaction against war is world-wide and that includes a reaction against warlike methods anywhere and everywhere.

What is the use of scrapping the battleships if the battleship spirit is to rule the world? The spirit of war must be sunk with the ships or the spirit will call the ships back again.

China presents an opportunity for the testing of the depth and strength of the anti-war spirit. China has asked to be allowed to work out her destiny as a recognized power. Why not? She must be admitted some day. Why not now? Japan is finding that those who advise the submission of her destiny to force, and good will for dictation, wish her well and feel sure that Japan will profit in every way by giving immediate assurances of her desire to welcome China as a neighbor and friend on terms of equality.

As China's nearest big neighbor, Japan should be the first to recognize and defend China's right to equal treatment. She should be China's "big brother" to speak.

Japan has a chance to win the admiration of the world and forever to silence those who misrepresent her purpose as some "yellow" nation. Japan can convert what seems to be a stumbling block into a stepping stone to prestige and moral power. China cannot secure more than a second-class position unless she is treated as an equal. Japan should be generous in this case and give a rainbow with a real scale of real gold at each end of it.

ASSETS OF BOND HOUSE ARE SOLD

(Continued From Page 10) no inequality," said the court. "It is a useless procedure to require the bidder to put up cash with one hand and take it down with another. What difference can it make if the assets are sold to a creditor and he is allowed to take credit for his dividends? I can see no legal objection to the trustee allowing the purchaser credit on the purchase price for his dividends."

ORDER AFFIRMED

The judge also held that a court of equity has the legal right to allow a reasonable time for payment. The reorganization committee proposes to surrender its $117,293.54 dividends to the trustee the minute the deal is closed, as the first payment on the purchase price. They also propose to pay $100,000 within 30 days, $200,000 within 60 days, and the balance within 90 days.

"This court can only examine the matter as it respects errors in law, which include an abuse of discretion," said the court. "While the point is made that the order approving the sale was an abuse of discretion, it is not necessary to pursue it for the admitted fact that Etheridge has some interest in the Morris Brothers corporation does not, in legal consequence, impair the responsibility of the company. It is sufficient for the present exigencies that its management is in other hands."

"I have no doubt but that the trustee has authority to make such a contract, and the court should approve it, as has the referee," said Judge Wolverton, in conclusion. "The order of the referee is affirmed."

Thugs and Officer In Revolver Duel But All Shots Miss

Following two robbers into the Boulevard garage, forty-second street and Sandy boulevard, at 6 o'clock Sunday night, Patrolman Hatch engaged in a revolver duel with one of them that started as soon as one robber, who was armed, commanded A. A. Knight, in charge of the garage, to hold up his hands. The men ran from the garage south toward Sullivan gulch, which the O. W. R. N. traverses.

Americans to Turn Bahama Island Into Second Monte Carlo

Washington, Nov. 21.—The purchase of an island in the Bahamas group, 45 miles off the Florida coast, by a group of American capitalists, who propose to transform it into a resort like Europe's famous Monte Carlo, is reported here. Several capitalists interested are in Washington and have exhibited their charter. The company is organized under the name of The Grand Bahama Mercantile & Development Co., Ltd., the charter having been obtained in Nassau, Bahama Islands, on October 16.

ROY GARDNER AND HIS CAPTOR

G.P.S.

Federal Grand Jury Ordered to Take Up Roy Gardner Case

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 21.—(U. N. S.)—U. S. Marshal Dillon announced today that the federal grand jury has been ordered by Judge Sawtelle to reconvene here next Wednesday morning to take action on charges against Roy Gardner, mail bandit, in connection with his attempt last week to rob a Santa Fe mail car.

It was also announced that the trial jury has been ordered to convene, indicating that there will be a speedy handling of Gardner's case.

GARDNER CYCLE FOUND Oregon City, Nov. 21.—The motorcycle stolen by Roy Gardner, mail bandit, as he passed through Oregon City on his way south, has been recovered in San Diego, Cal., and will be returned to its owner, J. C. Hansen of this city. The machine was stolen from Nash's barn at Seventh and J. Q. Adams streets. It was originally equipped with a sidecar, but Gardner evidently removed it. It was abandoned by him at San Diego when the engine was frozen.

Fruit Exposition To Go On Despite Storm of Elements

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 21.—(U. P.)—Apple blossoms will bloom amid the snow today when at 2 p. m. the doors of the Pacific Northwest Fruit exposition will swing open to the public.

The snow will not stop the scheduled games of the barnyard golf tournament. Large boxes filled with snow will be placed on the dance floor and contesting teams will be given an opportunity of showing their skill. The first game will be played by the Kiwanis club versus the Rotary club.

A public reception will be given Queen Pippin and her court of Royal Peaches at 8:30 p. m. The week will be a gala one for Seattle, with Queen Pippin reigning supreme, despite the snow that descended on the Northwest last Saturday and which continued through last night.

A complete change of program will be made each day. Fruit residents in display and orchards filled with orchards of blossoming apple trees will make the inside attractive.

Thugs and Officer In Revolver Duel But All Shots Miss

Following two robbers into the Boulevard garage, forty-second street and Sandy boulevard, at 6 o'clock Sunday night, Patrolman Hatch engaged in a revolver duel with one of them that started as soon as one robber, who was armed, commanded A. A. Knight, in charge of the garage, to hold up his hands. The men ran from the garage south toward Sullivan gulch, which the O. W. R. N. traverses.

Patrolman Hatch was the mark for three or four shots and fired as many at the robbers, but the only visible result of the fusillade was a broken windshield, alongside of which the officer had taken station.

One robber was described as about 28 years of age, and of medium build, while the age of the other was said to be about the same. Both were overcoats, but had no masks. The interruption of the patrolman saved the contents of the cash register.

HARDING LEAVES PARLEY WORK TO U. S. DELEGATION

By Robert J. Bender (Copyright, 1921, by United Press) Washington, Nov. 21.—President Harding has chosen as members of his cabinet men of generally acknowledged superiority in their respective fields and of whom he is not jealous.

The point is interesting for two reasons—first, because Harding himself believes that the success of the present arms conference, so far as the United States is concerned, is largely dependent upon the stability of the American delegation to present a united front, undisturbed by personal ambitions and petty jealousies.

In the second place the president, during his long term of public life, knows how many good endeavors have crashed on the rock of individual animosities, mostly the result of stirred up jealousies.

HARDING STAYS IN BACKGROUND For that reason the president desires—and this may be regarded as his spoken word on the matter—to remain in the background of the present arms conference picture.

As early as pre-election days the president formulated the idea of an international conference to discuss limitation of armaments, out of which, he hoped, would grow a world understanding to which all people would subscribe. It was his idea of America's "association with nations" as differentiated from a league that placed in the hands of eight nations a power popularly regarded as "super-government."

The naval limitation program outlined by Secretary Hughes in the momentous address of November 12 was not President Harding's handiwork, as some have been led to believe.

Rather, it was the outgrowth of weeks of study in which American naval experts, the American arms delegation—and President Harding—played their individual parts. Harding does not believe that there should be any reason for calling this plan, if it proves acceptable to the world, the program of any individual. He feels that it should be regarded as the "American plan," "administration plan" or even the "Hughes plan" if there be those who wish to attach it to a personality.

EVERYONE INTERESTED In the general movement for limiting armaments—the press included—the president feels, should come in for his share of the glory, if glory there is. If it proves successful, full "there would be no reason for all," in his opinion. For some reason it would seem idle for anyone to attempt the stirring of personal animosities among those trying to bring out of this conference what the world is looking for.

So far as the formulation of the naval program enunciated by Secretary Hughes is concerned, this is how it developed: The navy department submitted to president Harding a group of different approaches to naval limitation of arms. Harding in turn submitted these proposals to the American delegates to the conference. After a study of the several plans the delegates drafted a general proposal along the lines of that enunciated by Hughes, and asked the navy department experts to give them the facts and figures which would make such proposals possible. The navy experts worked the program in accordance with the wishes of the arms delegates. It is not too much to say that many of these experts solved the problem in accordance with the orders with grave misgivings. But they furnished the data. It was, therefore, an all-American program, as President Harding would like to have it recognized. It was even tripartisan in the sense that a Democrat was one of the arms delegation who originally advocated it.

And Harding, in the meantime, who is quite willing to let privately about his own ignorance of international politics, is leaving the problem to his advisors.

It is a rare tribute to them, for which he admittedly asks no reward. And yet, if the thing works out, his perhaps, will be a greater reward than accruing to any of those more largely responsible for the solution of the intricate details.

Eleven Are Killed In Movie Explosion

Hamburg, Nov. 21.—(U. N. S.)—Eleven persons were killed and several injured in an explosion at a moving picture house near here today. The explosion occurred during a children's performance. The cause was unknown.

Some Figures published for the benefit of gas consumers.

With summery sunny weather almost any gas-appliance will suffice to take off the morning chill. Now that cold weather has come, you want your home warm. It would be unsafe for your family to have to live in an underheated house.

Therefore, the following figures should be borne in mind in all installations of gas appliances (no matter what make), provided, of course, that they are scientifically built and fully efficient:

Name	Burns Per Hour at Full Capacity	Capable of Heating to 70 Degrees (With the Outside Temperature as Low as 10 Above)
Floor Furnace	40 cubic feet of gas	2,750 cub. ft. of space
Bungalow	100 " "	6,800 " " "
Pipeless (4 Sec.)	30 " "	3,500 " " "
Pipeless (8 Sec.)	125 " "	5,500 " " "
Pipeless (16 Sec.)	200 " "	14,000 " " "
Gasco (8 Sec.)	125 " "	14,000 " " "
Gasco (16 Sec.)	200 " "	5,500 " " "
Gasco (24 Sec.)	225 " "	18,000 " " "
Et Cetera

Of course, the figures given for cubic feet of space are an average, as much depends on exposure and number of windows.

Multiply the length by width by height of the rooms you are going to heat, which gives you the total cubic feet of space.

Cut out the above table and keep it, either for your future use or to enable you to instruct someone else.
