all of Oregon and spend their money all over Oregon. Many of them will see the Pendleton Round-Up, see historical scenes at Astoria, see the fruit shows of Southern Oregon, see the state and county fairs, see the reclaimed farm lands of Eastern Oregon, see the broad acres of the Willamette valley and see the impressive scenery throughout the state.

The exposition, if finally approved, will in fact cover in exhibits a wider range and comprise more in publicity of resources than any similar event of the past. The heavy vote in favor of it in Portland will probably mean that there will be no organized opposition against it in the state election.

A PROPER PROMOTION
The promotion of Patrolman Persinger of the Portland police department for honest and efficient service is an excellent example of the proper basis for promotions of those in the public employ, and more especially in the police department.

Some men would have accepted the bribe, permitted the poisonous opiates to go through and be distributed to hapless slaves, and aided the blood-sucking distributor to obtain his tainted profits. But Persinger recognized his oath, performed his duty, and rendered a service to his employers. For it, the rewards should be his. And other men in the police department should be rewarded for similar service, and no other.

THE SEEDS OF WAR
ONE of the sanest proposals to the Washington conference is the modest request of the Chinese delegation. Two proposals are made: (1) That China be allowed to work out her own destiny in her own way; (2) that she be freed from the spheres of influence placed over her in the past by other nations.

Public, these proposals have been accepted "in principle"; in private, there will be reservations and attempts at bargaining to defeat if not destroy the principle. Behind the scenes, the reservations and bargains are already discreetly suggested among the negotiators.

Take the attitude of Japan toward China. It is exemplified in the demands made in 1915. In groups, they are thus classified: 1. Japan to have economic concessions in Manchuria. Economic advantages are an innocent proposal. But the hard lines of history have taught that economic control ultimately means political control.

THE WORD THAT WAS UNSPOKEN
Armaments Conference Tested Through Consideration of Secretary Hughes' Idea of Announcing His Plans—Study of the League of Nations Was Studious Omission of a Name He Did Not Care to Utter—The League Still the Main Event

By Bertha Slater Smith
The world is so lured to postponement of its own duties that it suddenly collides with the fulfillment of a cherished dream it gasps for breath and asks how it happened.

When in his noteworthy speech Mr. Hughes reviewed the development of the disarmament idea, he excluded all reference to the League of Nations and to the fact that a disarmament conference was arranged for in the League of Nations covenant. Why did the speaker omit these important historical facts?

Everyone knows, however, that the Washington idea was conceived as an offset to the meeting proposed by the League of Nations in 1920. It was an attempt to bring the entire world into one place like home, but still its selfishness doesn't allow it to concede to the conscience and choose once the right road.

WATER'S WONDERS
A PATCH of sagebrush 25 years ago is now the "Apple Capital of the World." Thus, in a sentence, the recent history of the Wenatchee district is related.

When a tree loses a limb in a silver freeze it is much better off than a man in similar position. The tree can grow another limb.

THE HARMLESS, USEFUL TOAD
Lillian Trott in Our Dumb Animals.
The toad must catch his own meals. He scorns dead food. He must see it move to be sure it has not slipped the bonds of life and begun to spoil.
