

SPECIAL ELECTION TO PICK HUME'S SUCCESSOR LIKELY

Richard Deich, judge of the district court, says that according to his interpretation of the law, Governor Olcott must call a special election in Multnomah county before the special session of the legislature, December 15, to fill the vacancy made by the death of State Senator Wilson T. Hume.

The expense of such an election to the county would amount to about $25,000, and because of this county commissioners and officials were much concerned today when they heard the view expressed by a number of attorneys that the election appeared to be necessary.

Other attorneys among them Frank Longeman and John Stevenson, expressed the belief that the law does not mean a special election must be held to fill a vacancy before a special session.

Section 4038, chapter eight, of Olcott's Oregon Laws, reads as follows:

"When any vacancy shall occur in the office of the senate or house of representatives, by death, resignation, or otherwise, and a session of the legislature is to take place before the next biennial election, the governor shall issue a writ of election, directed to the sheriff of the county, or sheriffs of the counties composing the district in which such vacancy shall occur, commanding him or them to notify the several judges of election in his county or their district to hold a special election to fill such vacancy or vacancies, at a time appointed by the governor."

The state constitution expressly authorizes the governor, under section 17, article five, to call special elections to fill vacancies in the state legislature.

The city election on the tax for the 1925 fair cost approximately $21,000. Election of a state senator, taking in the entire county, would cost several thousand dollars more.

District Attorney Myers said from a casual glance at the law it appeared mandatory but he declined to give his opinion until he had given it a thorough examination.

County Commissioner Holman wondered where the money would come from if the election proved necessary.

American Education Week Plan Is Being Formed in Schools

American education week will be observed December 4 to 10, arrangements for which are being made by Superintendent D. A. Grout and the American Legion, which is cooperating with the National Education association.

The week has been proclaimed by President Harding for the nation-wide purpose of informing the public of the accomplishments and needs of the public schools and to secure the needed cooperation and support of the public in meeting these needs.

Mayor George L. Baker will issue a similar proclamation for Portland Mr. Grout said this morning.

Tentative program in Portland includes a "school Sunday," December 4, when ministers will preach on education, talks in the schools on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by speakers furnished by the American Legion, and open day in the schools on Thursday and Friday for parents to see what the schools are undertaking. Civic clubs will also be asked to observe the week at their luncheons.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT
Freswater, Nov. 25.—J. C. Crimmens, city marshal, met with a painful accident while dressing, his revolver fell from his hip pocket to the floor and was discharged. The bullet passed through the fleshy part of the thigh and lodged in the ceiling.

PI BETA PHI
Pi Beta Phi will meet Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John R. Turner, at 484 Rodney avenue, at 2:30 o'clock for Thanksgiving meeting. All alumnae and active members in the city are urged to be present. Take Woodlawn car to Eugene street.

Chiloquin Real Wild West Booze and Bullets Abound

Klamath Falls, Nov. 25.—In addition to having the distinction of being the only county in the United States having three courthouses, Klamath Falls will lay claim to having the only remaining Wild West town.

This town is Chiloquin, located on Klamath Indian reservation at the junction of the Sprague and Williamson rivers, 35 miles north of Klamath Falls. The population of perhaps 150 is made up of Indians and whites. And though small, Chiloquin like the early frontier towns, can furnish more thrills in a day than many larger cities in a month.

These statements are born out by T. L. Snook, who has been justice of the peace at Chiloquin for about two weeks. During his brief incumbency Justice Snook has fined no less than 16 miscreants and had, at last report, eight warrants and two cases pending. Most of the fines are levied for being drunk and disorderly.

Gun-play is not infrequent, says Justice Snook. In fact, it is so common as to excite little comment except among those who feel that the old days of the Wild West should exist in the movies only. He estimates that during the past six weeks no less than 1000 shots have been fired within the town, at least one of which was with intent to kill. One resident, taking exception to the manner in which another parted his hair, fired two shots at him with a 30-30 caliber rifle. Fortunately, his hand was unsteady and the bullets missed their mark. Everything from a 22 caliber rifle to a double barreled shotgun is used, says Justice Snook, and little regard is had for the hour of day or night.

Much of this shooting is born of an exuberance inspired by moonshine. Bootleggers reap a harvest among the Indians, waxing prosperous and insolent until the heavy hand of Uncle Sam, personified in Walter G. West, superintendent of the reservation, is laid upon them. Recently Joe Garcia, a Mexican, former exploit who kept him in public print, was arrested before Bert C. Thomas, United States commissioner at Klamath Falls, and charged with selling liquor to Indians. Testimony showed that Garcia, in company with three others, had imbibed of moonshine, the four then amusing themselves by driving an automobile up and down the main street of the town, attempting to run down children and dogs. That they failed in their attempts perhaps was no fault of their own. One boy, it was shown, barely escaped the mad rush of the car, while the success of the dogs is not a matter of record.

This escapade terminated when the car turned turtle, its speed being such, according to witnesses, that it traveled 18 feet through the air before landing bottom up and pinning the four occupants underneath. Only one of the four was injured, Garcia himself coming out unscathed. In addition to facing the liquor charge, Garcia also is under bond to appear on a charge of attempting the life of an officer. This incident occurred on July 4 when, it is charged, he attempted to shoot Fort Summers, Indian policeman. The gun missed fire.

Another hearing before Commissioner Thomas which occasioned much interest was that of Kirby Smith, a lumber camp cook. Kirby, the testimony showed, after coming to Chiloquin for the winter, immediately started in to manufacture home brew and to give his friends a good time. He admitted the manufacture of the home brew, but denied selling it to Indians, part which he was charged. An outstanding feature of this trial was the testimony of "Slim" Davis. Davis said he often attended the social gatherings at Smith's and astounded the court by declaring that he thought nothing of drinking four quarts of the home brew "sitting." Smith was bound over to the federal grand jury under $1000 bond.

Justice Snook, aided by the reservation authorities, is determined to discourage the Wild West proclivities of his fellow townsmen. Chiloquin is the natural outlet of a vast quantity of yellow pine timber and the gateway of a great stock country. With the completion of the Natron cutoff, it is expected that the town will grow by leaps and bounds. In the meantime, the better element of the population feels that when the boom starts they should not be hampered by the gun-bedecked and whiskey-loving Wild West advocates who, until now, have virtually been in control of the town. No fines of less than $25 are levied and they range upward, according to the seriousness of the offense.

Perhaps the better element of the population here that when the boom starts they should not be hampered by the gun-bedecked and whiskey-loving Wild West advocates who, until now, have virtually been in control of the town. No fines of less than $25 are levied and they range upward, according to the seriousness of the offense.

COLUMBIA SALMON BECOMING SCARCE

By Hymna H. Cohen

There is a temporary scarcity of salmon in the markets at this time. Due to the rapid rising and the heavy current in the river, fishing interests have been unable to operate generally along the Columbia, while transportation has tied up offerings from other streams.

Nevertheless there is no real famine of offerings of fresh salmon at this time, due to the previous liberal stocks. Practically the only supplies, however, are the cheaper quality fish, but there is scarcely one person in the city who can tell the difference after the food is cooked.

Many pay extreme prices for fish or other foodstuffs simply because "it looks good." This applies to salmon at this time. Many are paying double what they should be for salmon simply because they buy with their eyes.

There is a fair supply of halibut available and this is today moderately priced. Scarcity of crabs is shown, but there are plenty of razor clams in sight. Ocean smelt, perch and fish are in fair supply and are at usual prices.

Hard shell clams—the little neck variety—are in good supply and the quality is excellent.

Markets are well stocked with both Olympia and Eastern oysters.

for several years between the city and county over which is entitled to the fund. The opinion states that the money rightfully belongs to the city and that the council had a right to direct its expenditure. It will be used to pay for the improvement of South Steppes street where it meets the Pacific highway.
