

PROHI PARTY TO FADE OUT; FEELS BATTLE IS WON

By Alexander F. Jones
United News Staff Correspondent
Chicago, Nov. 30.—The national committee of the Prohibition party is here and is looking ultra-glim.

To outward appearance it would seem that the Prohibition act had just been declared unconstitutional, or something.

But it isn't anything like that, leaders admitted Tuesday.

It is simply that there they have a perfectly good party that has functioned for 40 years, that never won an important election and yet has won everything, and there does not seem to be any more use for it.

All of these suggestions seemed a little light to the veterans of the white ribbon. What they want is a bang-up, stalling hot, sawdust trail issue that will knock the Republican and Democratic parties into the ash can.

There doesn't seem to be one in sight. The way it looked after the advisory committee meeting, preceding the opening session of the convention Wednesday, the Prohibition party is about to be laid away in moth balls, with appropriate wreaths, and the members are going to hook up with the recalcitrant Republicans and Democrats, depending on how these parties interpret the dry laws locally or nationally.

There were tears and declamation of a brand that would make Premier Briand's Washington effort seem feeble indeed when member after member stood up and advocated that the party be solemnly interred.

Gray haired men and women dabbed their eyes when John B. Lewis of Massachusetts, described by the chairman as "the mentor of prohibition," took the floor and advocated that the party never back any presidential ticket of its own.

It was an affecting scene.

"We have accomplished the work of 40 years," he said. "Now we are in a position where we can throw our strength to either party, depending on its stand on law enforcement. If President Harding and the Republicans do our work for us we should work with him."

"But what has he done? He and his administration," shouted a bitter-ender "Signed the anti-beer bill," echoed Lewis.

There were hot words against Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon. Mellon found a friend in L. G. Hohenthal, Connecticut legislator.

"Enforcement of the law is not a party question," he said. "The trouble with some of us is that we expect the milk-lum in two years. The liquor traffic was legal since our history began. We must work quietly and determinedly with the powers that be. We could never win an election, as William Jennings Bryan told us at Lincoln, Neb., and he should know."

There were cheers and sounds of "hear, hear."

What the committeeman said about prohibition tents is probably causing more than one ear to tingle.

"You wouldn't expect the leader of a band of horse thieves to enforce the law against horse stealing," said National Treasurer H. P. Paris of Missouri. "No more can you expect prohibition enforcement so long as wet men are chosen to enforce the laws."

National Chairman Virgil Hinshaw declared that the committee should demand an outspoken statement of Harding's stand on prohibition.

Farmers of Nation To Tell President Their Ideas of War

(By United News)
Washington, Nov. 30.—The farmers of the nation will testify their support of the arms conference by waiting upon President Harding at the White House December 7.

Through their representatives, a committee from the national board of farm organizations, the farmers will present resolutions, which, according to the national board announcement, will "inform the country and the world just what the farmers of America want and what they are willing to do to hasten the day when wars shall cease to vex humanity."

Dr. Lorenz Falls In Faint as He Treats Cripples

(By United News)
New York, Nov. 30.—The strength of Dr. Adolph Lorenz's great hands is still remarkable. His scientific brain is as capable and active as ever and his will to work as strong. But the passing years have told on his physical resistance.

Three times, while he was examining prospective patients at the hospital for joint diseases here, he fainted. Each time he was revived only to go on with the task.

It was a tedious day for the Austrian surgeon. At 6:30 in the morning when he arrived at the hospital, a long line of cripples, hundreds of children, youths, men and women, were waiting in the hope that each would be singled out for the next operation.

In the midst of his examination Dr. Lorenz collapsed. He was urged to stop work for the remainder of the day, but refused, and after a 10-minute rest continued his examinations. Twice more he was overcome, but remained at the hospital until he had seen 100 of the sufferers.

At 11 o'clock on the night before a tragic line of humans took up a vigil at the hospital. All through the night more than a hundred parents braved the rain with their crippled children to await the coming in the morning of the man who is in America "to repay Austria's debt to America's children."

In spite of the pleading of the hospital authorities that the surgeon could not see them all before next Tuesday they held their places in line, trusting to change work for some of them it had been the third night of waiting.

WORK IS ACCOMPLISHED

"We have accomplished the work of 40 years," he said. "Now we are in a position where we can throw our strength to either party, depending on its stand on law enforcement. If President Harding and the Republicans do our work for us we should work with him."

"But what has he done? He and his administration," shouted a bitter-ender "Signed the anti-beer bill," echoed Lewis.
