

PINE BEETLE PEST TIMBER ENEMY IN SOUTHERN OREGON

During the last 10 years trees containing 1,500,000 board feet of yellow pine timber in Southern Oregon have been killed by the pine bark beetle, says A. J. Jaenicke, inspect specialist for the United States forest service who has just returned from a five months survey of the infested area, made by himself, together with representatives of the U. S. bureau of entomology, Indian service and Klamath Lake County Forest association.

The project involved in the proposed appropriation by congress of $150,000 and an equal amount by private timber owners includes 1,500,000 acres, containing 12,000,000 board feet of timber, of which about half is on government land and the other half on private lands. The government timber is located on the Crater, Fremont, Klamath national forests and Klamath Indian reservation in Oregon, and the Modoc national forest in California. The valuation of the timber infested is $16,000,000.

CONTROL METHOD STUDIED

The purpose of the survey was twofold, said Jaenicke, to ascertain the amount of timber damaged and to determine the best effective control methods. The survey party has located the worst centers of insect damage, and the activity next spring, if funds are forthcoming, will be to concentrate in wiping out these centers. Unless control work is done by both private owners and the government, the timber will continue to suffer at a rate which may possibly exceed the damage which has already occurred, because the beetles are already established. The method will consist of felling the trees in these centers, stripping the bark and burning it. Work must be done before June as the beetles emerge and fly away at that time.

Attention was first turned to the Southern Oregon yellow pine bark beetle last spring, when private timber owners following a meeting at Klamath Falls, appealed to Colonel Greeley, United States forester, for aid in controlling the government land infested area, the private owners maintaining it was useless to concentrate on the beetles themselves, unless similar measures were taken on adjoining government land.

$148,000 IS NEEDED
Jaenicke was sent by Greeley on a special mission to make estimates for congressional appropriation, and reported that $148,000 would be necessary for government land control. This was the basis for the present bill for $150,000 appropriation that was introduced in congress and has now passed the house.

The section of yellow pine affected is the finest stand on the Pacific coast, says Jaenicke. Control measures will be most effective next spring, since the infestation is temporarily on a decline and the beetles have collected on a comparatively small number of trees. Control measures will be most effective if the beetles can be destroyed before they spread over a larger area. Jaenicke reports the most cooperation among private timber owners who are eager to start control measures and who will finance the entire cost on their lands. If any private owner exists who is unwilling to do his part, he is then compelled to because of a law on the Oregon statutes, says Jaenicke.

Every disabled soldier who is able will be taken to one of the hotels and entertained and those who cannot leave the hospitals will be visited by a committee of the club and have brought to them Christmas cheer.

The general committee in charge of the ball is composed of Vice President George C. Mason, chairman, Dr. Joseph H. Hill, Thomas J. Swivel and H. V. Carrington. The chairmen of the other committees are: Decorations, Thomas Luke; floor, William J. Rouse; cards, Clarence DeFries; Patronesses, Norman M. Ruppe. The tickets will be sold by four teams, captained respectively by Kenneth Hauser, Frank Tebbets, Charles Mead and Robert H. Cook. They will be assisted by 12 lieutenants and the entire membership of the Rotary club.

Heavy Snow Raises Water, Stops Bridge

Goldendale, Wash., Dec. 5.—On account of high water in the Big Klickitat river, construction work on the steel bridge across the river at the foot of the grade on the highway from Goldendale to Glenwood in the Mount Adams section of Klickitat county, which is being built by the Portland Bridge & Iron works, has been discontinued after being held up 10 days due to the deep snow in the Big Klickitat canyon. Martin Spalding, Roy Fenton and Lynn Spalding, three members of the construction crew, arrived at Goldendale Saturday, after a 35-mile hike through the mountains. The trio started on skis, but had to discard them on account of the soft snow, caused by Chinook winds and recent heavy rains. They say the snowfall in the upper Big Klickitat canyon was 42 inches.
