

DEMOCRATS WILL RALLY ON JACKSON DAY, JANUARY 8

Saturday evening the Democrats of Oregon will rally at the annual Jackson day dinner at the Jackson club at the Hotel Benson for a consideration of the affairs of the Democratic party. Similar gatherings will be held throughout the United States.

It was on January 8, 1815, that Andrew Jackson inflicted a severe defeat on the British at New Orleans, the battle taking place 15 days after the treaty of Ghent had been signed. Subsequently, or in 1821, leading an expedition against the Seminoles in Florida, Jackson became military governor of Florida. From 1823 to 1829 he served in the United States senate from Tennessee. In the presidential campaign of 1824, in which he was a candidate, no one received a clear majority in the electoral college, and when the issue was determined in the house of representatives John Quincy Adams was elected.

In 1829, however, Jackson was elected president and was re-elected in 1832. After two terms as chief executive, during the formative period of the United States, Jackson retired with a popularity greater than that with which he entered. It is the broad strategy of Thomas Jefferson, the constructive militancy of Andrew Jackson and the progressive idealism of Woodrow Wilson that inspire the Democratic party to greater achievements in the future.

Harding Will Boss Legislative Plans; Party Menace Seen

By Raymond Clapper

Prompt action on the foreign debt refunding bill was asked by the president again.

Dieck Discusses Work of the State Tax Commission

Robert G. Dieck, former city commissioner of public works, and now associated with the tax supervising and conservation commission, discussed the work of that much-talked-of public body before the noon luncheon of the City club at the Benson today.

Mr. Dieck explained the functions of the tax body and told in detail of the manner in which it had gone through the budgets of the various tax levying bodies of Multnomah county and of the resultant saving in taxation which followed its work. He said that one result of the work of the commission would undoubtedly be a revision of the book-keeping or accounting system of the county government which would broaden the scope of the records kept by the county auditor so that the exact financial condition of the county could be determined at any time, a thing that is not now possible.

The speaker pointed to the contemplated establishment of the booth system for the east side by the police department, and to various other suggested changes in county and city government which would doubtless be of benefit to the taxpaying citizens. He contended that the effect of the work done by the commission would be more clearly reflected by the end of the year, or by the time the next year's budget came up for consideration, and predicted that the labors of the commission would meet with general public approval.
