

JOHNSTON LABORED UNDER DELUSION, SAYS HIS WIFE

Permitted to talk Monday for the first time, since she was shot four times by her husband, Mrs. William Johnston, who is still in a serious condition at the Good Samaritan hospital, told authorities...

Mrs. Johnston said she and her mother, who had come to visit her when she began to fear her husband because of his erratic behavior, had both been trying to persuade Johnston to consult a brain specialist...

For some time she apparently had been laboring under the delusion that her wife was unfaithful, Mrs. Johnston told authorities. He had accused her of improper conduct with her own brother...

Mrs. Johnston said she and her mother seemed to have convinced him his fears were unfounded and persuaded him to go with them to see an alienist. While Mrs. Johnston was lying on her bed a few minutes before dressing to go to the doctor, Johnston entered the room and declared he was going to "end it all."

Immediately afterwards he began to shoot at his wife. On a former occasion Johnston was seen by his wife pointing a revolver at her through a crack in the door. When she spoke to him he laughed and put the revolver in his pocket...

Corner Earl Smith took charge of Johnston's body and announced no inquest would be held.

PROPERTY NOT LESS THAN A QUARTER MILLION DOLLARS

This is the gift this devoted Christian has turned over to McMinville college on condition that the name of the institution be changed to Linfield college in honor of and as a memorial for her husband, George Fisher Linfield.

"Approving of the policies of McMinville college and the determination of its trustees and officers to maintain a distinctly Christian institution, Mrs. Linfield decided that this was the place for her investment. She also had a conscientious conviction that she could not invest these funds other than in Christian education and still be true to the covenant made with her husband so many years ago."

The executive officers of the college have recognized Mrs. Linfield as the managing agent of these properties during her lifetime, or until the same are sold and the proceeds thereof turned over to the college. They will be sold as soon as can be done to advantage, and the proceeds given the college, when an annuity will be provided for Mrs. Linfield.

Besides the generous gift Mrs. Linfield has bestowed on this worthy school, she has other property in her own right. As dean of women at McMinville she is dearly beloved by all in her charge. In view of this magnificent endowment all the higher authorities of the Baptist church and its organizations have signified their approval of the change of name. The gift is by far the largest ever made to the institution by a single individual.

COLLEGE DEBT REDUCED During the last college year approximately $33,000 has been invested in a new gymnasium and equipment and a new science hall and other improvements. The college debt, which has vacillated around $34,000 during the 16 years of President Riley's incumbency, has been reduced to $12,750 in the last six months. A mortgage of $20,000, made in 1914, has been paid off. The real estate is now without encumbrance. The outstanding debt is now $1760, and prospects are that all will be paid off by the annual meeting in June next.

During the first semester of the present year the college has received 200 as full college students, as compared with 143 full students registering last year.

of the Pennsylvania State Normal school at Mansfield, Pa., teaching English and Latin. In 1877-78 she taught English and French and was preceptress of the Delaware Literary Institute at Franklin, N. Y.

CAME WEST IN 1885 "September 4, 1878, she was married to Rev. George Fisher Linfield, and after five years' experience as a minister's wife she went with him to Beaver Dam, Wis., where he became principal of Wayland academy and continued in this capacity till his death, April 30, 1890. Mrs. Linfield remained at Wayland as teacher of German, history and literature till June, 1894. In July of that year she entered the University of Chicago as a student for the degree of doctor of philosophy."

In April, 1895, she was called to Spokane by the illness of her parents, for whom she cared till they passed away, the father in 1913 and the mother in 1918. During this period she taught for 17 years in the Lewis and Clark high school in Spokane, excepting six months spent in Europe in 1906. She was the head of the department of modern languages, having seven teachers under her. She speaks both French and German fluently.

GIFTS ARE GENEROUS "She became a Christian at the age of 15, while a student at Rochester, and was baptized at Fenfield by Rev. J. A. Foster. She has been a most valuable counsellor on the state convention board of Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho, on the board of discharges hospitals at Spokane and on the board of this college."

"She has been a generous giver, having invested $10,000 in building Grace Baptist church at Spokane, and has been identified with the Woman's Foreign Mission society for more than 20 years, being a vice president a large portion of that time. Her husband was born at Randolph, Mass., September 6, 1846, and graduated from the University of Rochester in 1873 and from the seminary in 1876. He was ordained a Baptist minister at Moline, Ill., in 1877, and served five years. After two years at Muscatine, Iowa, he became principal of Wayland academy at Beaver Dam, Wis.

PLAN FOR EDUCATION "While laboring together for Wayland academy, Mr. and Mrs. Linfield entered into a covenant that, provided the Lord prospered, they would some day make a generous contribution toward Christian education. At that time, while both were drawing salaries, they agreed that one year he should say all expenses while she should invest somewhere, and the next year this plan should be reversed."

"Under this plan Mr. Linfield invested $2500 in a lot in Spokane, which is now, with its modest brick building, worth nearly $100,000. Other investments were made by Mrs. Linfield herself, and by her father, all of which have been carefully nurtured by her during all these years of her residence in Spokane.

"The gift of Mrs. Linfield to McMinville college consists of certain properties in Spokane, which are located in the very heart of the city, all being within three blocks of the Davernport hotel; the center of attraction in that city. A conservative valuation of these

SEES ESTATE BRIDGE PAID FOR WITHIN 21 YEARS

The Interstate bridge will pay for itself, its operating expenses and all interest charges involved, and even accumulate a surplus, within the next 21 years, declares Rufus C. Holman this morning after going over the annual report of the bridge finances as prepared by Alex. C. Ross, auditor.

The report shows that the gross income from tolls in 1921 was $295,900, or $24,784 less than the gross income for 1920. This decrease was due to the closing of the shipyards and consequent dropping off in traffic to and from the bridge.

The greatest load of telephone calls ever experienced in any office of the Portland exchange occurred at the Oregonian yesterday. In addition to the great number of calls which gave incorrect numbers to straight out, there were a great number of messages from subscribers who called their friends and customers to tell them of their telephone number change. No trouble was experienced with the change in the number of the police department telephone since a special board was handling the correction of this emergency call.

We have tried every way to obtain the cooperation of the subscribers in making this cut-over but yet we experienced a maximum of trouble," said C. E. Hickman, division commercial superintendent. "Annoyance to subscribers would be avoided if the old directories were thrown away and numbers were not called from memory."

Operating expenses in 1921 amounted to $42,515, leaving net earnings of $253,385. Multnomah county received $152,920 out of this, and Clarke county, Washington, $180,465. There was a decrease in every kind of traffic except traffic of trucks. A total of 3,244,000 persons crossed the bridge in the year. Motorists and autoists made up 2,224,000, and streetcar patrons 1,060,000. This is compared with 2,455,000 autoists and pedestrians in 1920 and 1,385,000 in 1919. In 1921 the bridge was crossed by 69,300 streetcars, 734,000 automobiles, and 114,000 trucks. In 1920 it was crossed by 75,785 streetcars, 746,000 automobiles, and 106,000 trucks.

Multnomah county issued $1,250,000 in bonds to pay for its share of the cost of the bridge. The bonds were sold on January 15 and the first bonds were retired in 1918. They have now retired $200,000 in bonds. The Interstate bridge commission visited the bridge this morning and later went over the report of finances.

Reeder from the trusteeship of the Reedport Light, Power company was filed this morning in the federal court, and Judge Wolverton thereafter ordered Reeder to show cause on February 6 why he should not be removed. CONFERENCE HERE WEDNESDAY: CHECK OF COOPERATION SEEN WAYS OF combating the traffic in narcotics in Portland will be discussed at the conference of law enforcing officials, presided over by Governor Ben W. Olcott for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce.

To lay the problem squarely before officials of the city, county, state and federal government an invitation has been sent to all judges of the circuit and federal courts in Oregon, to local officials and to any agency which might be interested in the eradication of the traffic.

It has been repeatedly proved that lack of cooperation between branches of the government has made it impossible to stamp out the traffic. Among the things to be discussed at the conference are: Care and treatment of the addicts, convictions and maximum penalties for dealers, and wiping out of the source of supply. It is recognized that Portland, being a seaport in direct connection with the Orient, is the distributing point of narcotics for the entire state. To assist in the fight against the traffic two special federal agents, W. C. McCarthy and Harry Haley, have been sent here from San Francisco. These officers will attend the conference.

Telephone Mixups Keep Operators on Jump Since Change

Another attempt was being made by employees of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company to straighten out the snarl of telephone service which existed in the Broadway office Monday following the cut-over of 4500 instruments from the Main-Marshall office the day before.

NEW RAILROAD IN ALASKA NOW READY FOR USE

The Alaskan railroad is an accomplished fact from sea level at Seward on Resurrection bay, northward to Fairbanks, a distance of 467 miles, according to William Gerig, who was a Portland visitor today.

After six years of construction work this government project now can be considered as an operating problem. To date the sum of $53,000,000 has been appropriated by Congress and additional $4,000,000 will be required for several remaining bridges and other items.

When the government undertook the project of building a railroad through the agricultural and mining regions of Alaska as a means of developing the resources of this rich territory the existing line of the Alaska Northern which extended 70 miles northward from Seward was taken over and rebuilt.

This Alaska railroad is a broad gauge line was constructed through Anchorage on Cook inlet into the interior to Nenana on the Nenana river. It is a standard gauge line. A bridge across the Tenana at this point remains to be built. From the Tenana river to Fairbanks, a distance of 53 miles, the line was constructed through the construction of the bridge will be converted into a standard gauge line. From Happy Station, near Fairbanks, an extension of 3 1/2 miles, creek, 3 1/2 miles, from Seward and a branch line of similar length extends from Matanuska into the Matanuska coal fields.

During the past season a total of 100 miles track were laid and 80 miles of grading were completed. Work proceeded from either end of the line and on November 24 the line was linked at Fairbanks. The line to Seward and 109 miles from Fairbanks.

Four thousand men were employed during the closing season and many of them will stay in Alaska to take up mining. Gerig is enthusiastic over the possibilities which the new line will open up, citing the variety of natural resources, heretofore practically undeveloped, which will be available through the operation of the railroad.

"Do not make the mistake of believing the road to be capable of operation only in midsummer," Gerig said. "The road is a year-around road. Six feet of snow is the greatest obstacle to be overcome during the winter, but it is not insurmountable in railroad operation. The low grade glacier fields adjacent to Fairbanks can be worked at a profit because of the railroad. It is estimated that $100,000,000 worth of gold is included in this deposit.

MAKE DEAL AVAILABLE "This mining requires fuel and prior to the coming of the railroad wood cost from $16 to $30 a cord at Fairbanks. This made mining unprofitable. By means of the railroad coal from the Matanuska field can be delivered at Fairbanks at $6 a ton and one ton of coal is equivalent to two cords of wood."

"In the earlier days supplies had to be brought into Fairbanks by dog team and during the summer season in winter transportation ceased. In consequence merchants were compelled to stock up once a year. The cost of a barrel of coal was $25 a barrel and oats at $14 a ton. Since the coming of the railroad these prices have been cut in half."

"Agriculture will be no mean undertaking also in the fertile valleys adjacent to the line."

EXPERIENCE IS WIDE Gerig has been in railroad work for 35 years. After being graduated from the University of Missouri he served on the Illinois Central, Frisco, Cotton Belt and Hill lines. Some years ago he was in the Oregon field under John E. Stanley, then chief engineer of the Pacific & Eastern line, which was projected southward from Medford to connect the Oregon trunk with the Northern line should be extended into Klamath Falls.

On the Alaska project Gerig served under William C. Edes and Colonel Frederick Mears, successive chairmen of the Alaska railroad commission. He is located in Seattle, winding up some affairs in connection with the construction of the Alaskan line.

Use Coconut Oil For Washing Hair If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisifed coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for washing hair. It does not possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls of Multisifed will make an excellent scalp treatment. It cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and does not become sticky, fluffy and greasy to manage.

You can get Multisifed coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Buy it before your drug store gives you Multisifed.

Youth Kicks When Police Rescue Him From Cake of Ice

(By United News) Chicago, Jan. 18.—When a squad of police and three fire companies turned out to rescue Max Rubin, 17, from his perilous position on a cake of ice floating down the drainage canal here, all they got for thanks was a protest from the diminutive navigator.

He was rescued after a police captain had raced ahead of the floating cake and threw him a rope from a bridge as he was about to pass under. Instead of gratitude, Max was full of gloom over his rescue.

"I'll get licked when I get home," he said. The captain took him home and "improved" with a frantic mother who had missed him for four hours.

ENGINEERS O. K. COOS BAY PROJECT Washington, Jan. 18.—(U. S. S.)—The government's rivers and harbors engineers today recommended to congress the appropriation of $2,100,000 for the improvement of Coos Bay harbor and Linn's slough in the state of Oregon. The improvements would include the dredging of a new channel.

The amount recommended by the government engineers tallies closely with the figures prepared by the office of Colonel J. B. Cavanaugh, engineer in charge of Oregon district No. 1, according to the statement of attaches of the office today.

In addition to the dredging of a new channel this appropriation would provide for the building of a south jetty. Between these two improvements measures the channel could be made safe at 30 feet of water. As it is the district engineers maintain dredge service each spring to reduce the bar at Coos Bay which averages about 21 feet in the winter and 30 feet in the summer.

ACCUSED CHINESE DECAPS; BAIL OF ONE HELD RAISED

Dan June, one of the men charged with the wounding of Lee Wong on August 1, found his bail raised to $5000 by Presiding Circuit Judge Tucker today, following the disappearance of Wong Tong, alias Albert Wong, Dan June's alleged partner in the shooting.

Circuit Judge Morrow, while presiding, fined the bail of the two men at $2500 each. When the case was called for trial Monday Wong Tong didn't show up. Arthur Mouton, his attorney, said he fled last week and couldn't be found.

Judge Tucker today ordered that Wong Tong's bail be forfeited and that a bench warrant be issued for the Chinese. Dan June went on trial at 2 o'clock today in Circuit Judge Kavanaugh's department.

Students of Chinese ways see a fine hand at work in Wong Tong's disappearance. Wong Tong violated the first principle of the tong gunman's handbook when he made a confession after being captured by detectives after the shooting of Lee Wong. He didn't say, "No save," as the Chinese is taught to do. He told the detectives he was one of the men who shot down Lee Wong.

He said he fled last week and couldn't be found. In fact, Wong Tong's confession is said to have been the backbone of the state's case against the two men. Court followers believe that maybe the Chinese decided they could afford to surrender a $2500 bond if in that way they could remove all likelihood of a conviction in the case against Dan June and the 10 men charged with being accessories after the fact.

Wong Tong and Dan June are Hop Sing, it is said, while the man who was wounded was a Suez Sing.
