

BUILDING CODES REVISED; CHANGES ARE NOT RADICAL

Revision of the building code has been completed, H. E. Plummer, chief of the bureau of buildings, announced this morning.

The changes in both codes are not radical, Plummer explained, "but were made to modernize the provisions for erection of buildings. At present there are no codes of the building code and the work will be rushed as much as possible so as to get the new code printed. The combination of the two codes is thought advisable as contractors and architects have one manual of standards to work from."
