SOUTHERN OREGON IS DECLARED RICH IN RARE PLANTS

The Siskiyou mountain region in Southern Oregon is found to be of unusual interest from a botanical standpoint, since there are blended the plant types of the redwood age together with those of more modern origin, says John D. Guthrie of the United States forest service, who has received a report from Washington on a number of plant specimens sent to it for identification.

A total of 276 plant specimens, collected by Grazing Examiner Ingram in the Siskiyou national forest, were sent to Washington for identification. From Washington comes the information that the specimens are rare finds, indeed, and requests are made for further samples and data as to where they are gathered.

OF ANCIENT EGYPT

Among the lot that was identified was the cyperus vegetas of the sedge family, which is related to the edible nut grass of the ancient Egyptians.

"This specimen is a botanical 'find,' since the plant is an old world species, and not listed in any manual of American plants," reads the report. "This is apparently the first record of its ever having been found in the United States."

Two grasses entirely new to the forest service were found, which were turned over to the United States national herbarium. A new lupine, which has never been named or described by anybody, was also in the assortment. One specimen could not be identified by any one in the national museum, although botanists decided it was evidently related to the poppies. The Portland office was asked for more material.

RARE GOOSEBERRY FOUND

The extremely rare Marshall gooseberry was one of the collection, and the likewise rare red dewberry, first discovered by Davis Douglas, the man for whom the Douglas fir was named.

An unusual species of juniper was another rare find, which the bureau of plant industry officials believed should have a specific rank and not be considered with communis juniper, the common type.

Of Ingram's entire collection, 30 species were found to be entirely new to the forest service.

Power is applied to the front wheels of a new French automobile, which are closer together than the rear ones.

Text of Treaty On Open Door

Washington, Jan. 18.—The arms conference announced the following as "the text of a resolution presented by the chairman at the meeting of the committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions:

THE OPEN DOOR IN CHINA

Revised draft of resolution.

1—With a view to applying more effectually the principles of the open door or equality of opportunity in China for trade or industry of all nations, the powers, other than China, represented at the conference, agree:

A—Not to seek or to support their nationals in seeking a right purporting to establish in favor of their superior rights with respect to commercial or economic development in any designated region of China.

B—Not to seek or support their nationals in seeking any such monopoly or preference as would deprive other nationals of the right of undertaking any legitimate trade or industry in China or of participating with the Chinese government or with any provincial government in any category of public enterprise or which by reason of its scope, duration or geographical extent is calculated to frustrate the practical application of the principle of opportunity.

It is understood that this agreement is not to be so construed as to prohibit the acquisition of such properties or rights as may be necessary to the conduct of a commercial, industrial or financial undertaking or to the encouragement of invention and research.

2—The Chinese government takes note of the above agreement and declares its intention of being guided by the same principles in dealing with applications for economic rights and privileges from governments of all foreign countries whether parties to that agreement or not.

3—The powers, including China, represented at the conference, agree in principle to the establishing of a board of reference to which any question arising from the above agreement and declaration may be referred for report.

4—The powers, including China, represented at this conference, agree that any provisions of an existing concession which appear inconsistent with those of another concession, or with the principles of the above agreement or declaration may be submitted by the parties concerned to the board of reference when established for the purpose of endeavoring to arrive at a satisfactory adjustment on equitable terms.

POWERS ADOPT IN PART U. S. PLAN

first step in some sort of international control of China by the powers.

FEARS FINAL ADOPTION

Wang said he feared final adoption of the resolution as it stood and the creation of the board of reference provided by it might result in vital Chinese questions facing the conference being relegated to a relatively unimportant body having no authority.

The Far Eastern committee meets today to hear the views of the smaller nations on the resolution. The Chinese delegation at the meeting today may announce its stand on the resolution.

The Hughes resolution makes wider the policy of "open door" through an international reference board, to whom questions over spheres of influence and "existing" concessions in China could be referred.

French objections was hampering today fruition of the American hope to some extent.

The purpose of the latest American move is three-fold. It aims at the following:

1—Provision to cancel by implication many of Japan's 21 demands.

2—Abolition of spheres of influence and review by the international board of existing concessions.

3—Keeping the open door open by means of an international board of review whose decisions would throw the light of day on any disputes.

The French manifested in the conference session a fear that the resolution would be dangerous to existing interests, though they say Hughes tried to sweep aside their objections.

HUGHES' MOTION DEFINES POLICY OF "OPEN DOOR"

By John Gleissner
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Jan. 18. — Secretary Hughes has proposed a resolution for the Far Eastern conference here, not only to more definitely define the old "open door" doctrine in China, but to set up machinery to see that the door is kept open.

By far the most sweeping application of the Hay doctrine ever attempted is provided for in the American proposal designed to end once and for all problems of friction growing out of violations of the "open door."

The new application of the old doctrine would embrace the following:

1.—Agreement by the nine signatory powers:

A.—Not to seek or assist their nationals in seeking any general superiority of rights for themselves in China.

B.—Not to seek or assist their nationals in seeking to deprive any other nationals of freedom of trade or any other commercial competitive activity in China.

2.—The Chinese government takes note of the agreements, and agrees on her part to be bound by the same principles.

BOARD IS PROPOSED

3.—A board of reference, constituted by representatives of the signatory powers, is created, so constituted as to provide a detailed scheme by which undertakings involving a question of violation of the principle of the "open door" may be thoroughly elucidated.

4.—The signatory powers agree that in event of a conflict of interests, or in event of an apparent violation of the principles of the "open door" the board of reference may review the cases.

Italy and Great Britain promptly accepted the new "open door" resolution in substance and in principle. Japan also expressed approval of the spirit of the resolution, raised no concrete objection to any part of it, but the delegation asked more time in which to study the text.

FRANCE TAKES EXCEPTIONS

M. Sarraut, head of the French delegation, while providing the resolution in principle made definite exception to Article 4. He believed this article would bring up the possibility of reviewing existing concessions, and have an unhappy effect because of the moral force involved in such a review. Other powers approved the resolution in principle, and at the close of the meeting it was stated by an American spokesman that:

"We appear to be near to the conclusion of a very great and important step but we are still in the period of negotiations."

The first approach toward strengthening the "open door" doctrine was made by Secretary Hughes in the Far Eastern committee meeting Monday with a resolution embodying merely Articles 1 and 2 of the present draft. There was humorous criticisms of this resolution, the most important one being made by Mr. Balfour, who declared that some machinery be established to aid in carrying out the agreements made.

Hughes then abandoned the original resolution, submitting for it the one written and offered Tuesday, which carried the machinery suggested by the British.

Warrenton Mill to Be Started Monday

Astoria, Jan. 18.—A report on the progress of a dredge making the fill at Warrenton for the new Prouty mill stated that the work was so far advanced that actual construction on the mill will be commenced Monday.

Wilson Foundation Drive Spurred

Wasco Citizens Rallying to Cause

"Wasco county is not going to fail in subscribing its quota to the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, even if I have to do all the soliciting myself," is the statement made by Judge Blakely of The Dalles, who is the leader for Wasco county in the Woodrow Wilson Foundation campaign. Judge Blakely reports that the campaign is going very well in Wasco county and proved his statement by bringing to headquarters a large list of donors and their subscriptions. However, there are a large number of Wasco county residents who have not been heard from, and the campaign for funds will continue to be waged in that county.

It is expected by those in charge of campaign headquarters of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, that other counties throughout the state will be heard from within a very short time, and in all probability one or more counties will go "over the top" with their quota within the next day or two. There is a feeling of rivalry between the various counties and county leaders, and all are making strenuous efforts to complete their quota first.

Additional subscribers to the Woodrow Wilson fund are as follows:

G. V. Ketchum, J. C. Corbin, Thomas G. Greene, Mrs. P. Bacon, Dr. E. A. Myers, E. H. White, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Conn, Bertha K. Young, Henry Rebe, Mrs. Adele V. Stearns, Berthine Mathison, Maude I. THERMOMETER GOES DOWN TO 16 DEGREES

ture in two years, 6 degrees below zero, was registered here Tuesday night. Snowfall has been slight.

FORTY DEGREES BELOW IS REPORTED AT WALLOWA

La Grande, Jan. 18.—The temperature in La Grande was 14 below zero this morning, and, in spite of the sun beating down on thermometers, the mercury had climbed but to zero at noon. This is the coldest day of the year in La Grande and Eastern Oregon in general. Reports from Wallowa are that the low mark there was 40 degrees below. At Kamela, near the summit of the Blue mountains, a temperature of 30 degrees below is reported.

Train 24, from the west, due at 10:50 o'clock this morning, was reported two hours late, the extreme cold weather being assigned as cause of delay. Four inches of new snow fell Monday and as result of heavy winds accompanying the drop in temperature Tuesday, drifts have interfered with traffic in all parts of the Grande Ronde valley, according to reports this morning.

FAIR AND COLD AT SALEM

Salem, Jan. 18.—With the thermometer registering 17 degrees above zero this morning, Salem experienced the coldest weather of the winter. The snow flurries, which fell in this section Tuesday, were speedily dissipated by the rain which followed and today is clear, fair and biting cold.

SEATTLE SHIVERS

Seattle, Jan. 18.—(U. P.)—This morning at 8:15 the mercury in Seattle registered 16 degrees. This, according to the weather bureau, is the lowest mark since December 12, 1919, when Seattle shivered in an atmosphere of 12 degrees. Three inches of snow covers the ground.

SUNSHINE TAKES SNOW

Montesano, Wash., Jan. 18.—Snow fell to a depth of two inches Tuesday, but melted rapidly in the bright sunshine.

NO SUFFERING REPORTED

Ridgefield, Wash., Jan. 18. — Snow Tuesday covered Ridgefield and surrounding country about two inches deep on the level but thawed later. No suffering of stock or cattle is reported.

BLIZZARD AT CHEHALIS

Chehalis, Wash., Jan. 18. — Chehalis and vicinity experienced an old-fashioned blizzard Tuesday. Cold rain Monday night turned to snow and in about two hours nearly four inches fell.

SAW SOLDIER SHOT, SAYS PORTLAND MAN

I was sent to the hospital on the verge of pneumonia," Walmer said.

Harry C. Miller, railroad brakeman who resides at the Globe hotel, narrated in detail, in an exclusive interview with The Journal some time ago, the killing of Fitzgeraid by Sergeant Kruppa.

Subsequent to the publication of the interview Miller wrote to Senator Watson, enclosing The Journal clipping of the interview, which has been put in the record of the investigating committee.

Fitzgerald, according to Miller, was confined at the prison for a minor infraction of military rules, and was shot and killed by Sergeant Kruppa because he asked for a second helping of rations.

"The killing was plain murder," Miller stated, "and was so considered by other men who witnessed the incident and were familiar with the facts. Kruppa asked me afterward if I saw the shooting and asked me what I thought about it. I told him that I considered the killing a murder."

Miller has not make any arrangements to go to Washington to testify at the hearing.
