CAMBRIDGE, Mass, Jan. 20.—Harvard isn't the least bit likely to play a smaller part in intercollegiate football or other athletics as a result of that Albright part of President Lowell's annual report, which questioned the advisability of "a public spectacle every Saturday throughout the autumn," it was learned Thursday.

Harvard alumni, undergraduates and other collegiate sport followers, consider that President Lowell's ideas are by no means anything new. At the office of the Harvard Athletic

As long as enormous prizes were attracting horses abroad with no adequate counter-balance in this country, the best stallions and mares would assuredly be lost to England, D'Abernon declared.

Great Britain had not been very fortunate lately, he said, in retaining championships, but the championship of the best horses in the world they certainly would not surrender without a vigorous effort and without doing what they could by skill, by knowledge and by scientific preparation to retain.

D'Abernon hoped that, without any idea of prescription or boycott, horse breeders in general would see to it that exceptional liberality on the part of race course executives was rewarded by exceptional support.
