Picture

NOTHING more realistic has been produced in the motion picture art than "Quo Vadis," which opened a brief engagement at the Heilig theatre Thursday. In the arena scene, where the Christians are fed to the lions and that great scene in which Rome is burned, one feels the terror and the panic of the fleeing populace as, bearing their household goods, their children and their aged relatives, they flee before the all-devouring flames. One contrasts, too, this scene when the Roman empire was crumbling with the scenes of today, when the inhabitants of many villages in Belgium and Northern France have likewise fled from their homes-but before the invading hordes, not to make a Roman emperor's

Nero, most corrupt of the Caesars, when the Eternal City was the melting pot of the world. The contrast between Nero and the Apostle Peter, the Empres Poppaea Augusta and Lygia, the Christian maiden, with the transformation of Vinitius' life and character through his love for Lygia are as vivid as anything in the drama or in literature. The scenes are real and spectacular. Nothing more realistic has been accomplished in photographic art than the portrayal of the great royal banquets, the burning of Rome and the scenes in the arena-the gladiatorial contests and the feeding of the Christians to the lions. and a white tub flannel skirt are a chic
