GRIPPED BY FEAR Three terror stricken passengers were the coach. Mac handed over the money box, containing $6800.

"Drive on," the bandit shouted and Mac complied but around a bend in the road, 75 yards away, he drew his horses to a halt, handed the lines to one of the passengers and jumped to the ground. He killed the robber and recovered the

SOUGHT HIS SCALP

Pals of the bandit swore they would get McNamer and the company transferred him to Nevada, on a run south of Carson, where he remained for three rears. From Nevada McNamer went to the Klamath couptry in Southern Oregon, where he engaged in stock raising, but later returned to California and ran a stage line of his own in Big Valley.

In 1891 he came to Forest Grove and stablished a stage line between this city and Tillamook. The route was over the beautiful scenic Wilson river country and the stages drawn by four horses were picturesque.

McNamer's mother died while he was a lad, and the father, Noah McNamer came by way of the Isthmus of Panama to dig for gold in California in 1849. In 1853 he came to Oregon, settling or a large farm near Greenville, Washing-STARTED YOUNG
