

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PUBLICATIONS HAVE TWO NEW EDITORS

(By United News)
Boston, Jan. 30.—After nearly three years of litigation and internal strife the three new trustees of the Christian Science Publishing society appointed Saturday by the Massachusetts supreme court were today to take over the affairs of the trust.

The only matter in the entire litigation left pending is the bill of John V. Dittmore, who claims to be still a member of the board of directors, although the board claims to have ousted him. This case is before a special master whose report has not yet been made. It is not really a part of the long struggle for power between the directors and the former trustees, which has just ended.

The three new trustees, supplanting Herbert Eustace, Paul Harvey and Lamont Howland, are William F. McKensie, James E. Patton and Fred M. Lamson. McKensie and Patton, with George Adams, were the original selections for the directors to replace the old trustees. Lamson is vice president of the Old Colony Trust company. Both the former trustees and the directors are to be satisfied with his appointment.

The directors announced Sunday night that they had elected two new Christian Science editors. William J. Abbott of New York, a widely known newspaper man and author, will become editor-in-chief of the Christian Science Monitor. Abbott is a Christian Scientist who has spent his life in journalistic and literary work.

Albert F. Gilmore of Brooklyn will take charge of the Christian Science periodicals, which are the Christian Science Journal, the Christian Science Sentinel, Le Herald (printed in French) and Der Herald (in German). He has served as a Christian Science first reader and practitioner and is on the publication committee of New York.

Portland Students On Dance Committee At Seattle School

University of Washington, Seattle, Jan. 30.—Vern Boyer and Ellene Howell, both of Portland, are members of the committee in charge of the junior prom, all-university formal of the second quarter, which will be held here February 4. The prom this year is known as the "Bizarre Ball," and a number of interesting features are promised by the committee.

Miss Boyer is a junior in the college of liberal arts and belongs to Delta Zeta sorority. She has been extremely active in campus committee work. Miss Howell is a junior in the school of journalism and belongs to Pi Beta Phi sorority. She was recently elected senior representative on the board of control, student governing body, which position she will hold from the middle of February, this year, until the middle of February, next year. She has been a member of the staff of the University Daily for two years.

Spokane Cooperates In Telephone Fight

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 30.—Assistance of the city council in the attempt of the state public service commission to lower telephone rates in the state was promised Saturday after official notification of the proposed action was read to the council. For the time being, so far as the telephone question is concerned, city commissioners have decided to quit a long and bitter fight with the state commission and cooperate to obtain lower telephone rates.

Snow 58 Inches at Government Camp

Sandy, Jan. 30.—Snow was 58 inches deep Saturday at Government Camp, and 68 inches deep at Bull Run lake. C. L. Hansen of the forest service reported about eight inches of snow and the sun shining at Zig Zag. The last snow fell on three or four inches of ice, which almost isolates the residents there.

County Prisoners Must Do Road Work

Heppner, Jan. 30.—The Morrow county court has decided to put on road work all prisoners receiving jail sentences and those in jail pending payment of fines, allowing men 75 cents a day in addition to board. Refusal to work will mean a diet of bread and water.

Mrs. A. B. Holliday, Well-Known Worker In Church, Is Dead

Mrs. A. B. Holliday died Sunday, January 22, surrounded by her children, at her home, 424 Sixty-sixth street southeast, at the age of 68. Funeral services were held in St. Anthony church and final services in Mount Scott Park cemetery, Thursday.

The immediate cause of her death was bronchial pneumonia. Although her life had always been quiet and unassuming, a wide circle of friends who knew her for her wholehearted and kindly nature and many charitable acts mourn her departure.

Mrs. Holliday was chairman of the Arleta Red Cross auxiliary and an active church worker. She is survived by four sons and three daughters, as follows: George A. Renne, Mrs. Josephine A. McCure, Mark J. Renne and Norman A. Holliday, all of Portland; Mrs. Pernie B. Kubermuss, Mrs. Minnie M. Turrell, both of Silverton, Ore., and Jesse E. Renne of Decatur, Mich.

Oregon to Fight for Its Quota Director Is Determined to Win

"Oregon still under 50 per cent of quota, but will continue fight until we win it if it takes all year." This was the message wired Hamilton Holt, executive director of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation campaign by C. S. Jackson, general chairman for Oregon, Saturday.

It was in response to a message from Director Holt, which said: "Reports from the first week of the national campaign are most encouraging. Widespread sentiment everywhere needs only expression through proper organization to more than attain fund. As campaign will proceed until the fund is raised, each is urged to continue unremitting effort until quota is reached." The roundup of Woodrow Wilson Foundation facts in Oregon at the end of the week showed lack of adequate reports from county chairmen, rendering impossible definite conclusions as to the status of the campaign in this state.

A considerable number of subscription coupons were published daily in The Journal, but there are thousands who desire the perpetuation of the Wilson ideals for world peace and safety who have yet to show their belief by their participation in the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

Filling out the coupon and sending it to Lumbermen Trust Company bank, state headquarters of the fund, is the easiest way to make the offering. Additional contributors acknowledged yesterday include: Mrs. R. T. Loomis, Mrs. Minnie W. Cooper, Donald Goetz, Mrs. G. R. Gulovson, E. P. Armstrong, Mrs. May Armstrong, L. E. Armstrong, H. T. Capell, W. B. Pruett, Miss Flora H. Kilgore, Oak Grove; Gilbert Robbins, Oregon City; Eugene H. Parsons, Corvallis, and A. L. Scheible of Kelson.

Annual Meeting on Tuberculosis Work Takes Places Feb. 9

The annual meeting of the Oregon Tuberculosis association will be held in room H, Central library, at 2:30 p. m., February 9. Annual reports will be given and topics of interest discussed. Dr. Paul Lewis, director of the laboratory of the Henry Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, will speak on "The Position of the Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign in the United States." Dr. Ray Mason, who has been studying in Europe during the past year, but who is to return to Portland a few days prior to the annual meeting, is expected to address the meeting.

The Portland City and County Medical society will join the tuberculosis association in presenting Dr. Lewis to Portland for an evening lecture, "The Relation of Heredity to Tuberculosis."

Saidie Orr-Dunbar To Make Addresses In Eastern Oregon

Mrs. Saidie Orr-Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association, left Thursday for Eastern Oregon for a week's stay. On Monday she will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Walla Walla County Public Health association to be held in Enterprise. On Wednesday she will be the guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon to be given by the women of La Grande who are interested in public health matters. She will spend Friday and Saturday in Bend, where she will attend the annual meeting of the Crook County Public Health association.

Miss Cecil Schreyer of the State Bureau of Nursing will attend the meeting at Enterprise and Miss Jane C. Allen, superintendent of the bureau, will attend the meeting at Bend.

SHACKLETON DIES ON SHIP IN SOUTH POLAR EXPEDITION

(By United News)
London, Jan. 30.—Sir Ernest Shackleton is dead.

The noted English explorer died aboard his ship, the Quest, upon which he was en route to the south polar regions with a body of scientists.

The advice to London, telling of Shackleton's death, states that a Norwegian steamer is bringing his body to Montevideo, from where it will be sent to England.

Shackleton's last letter, written to John Rowett, a lifelong friend, who chiefly financed the expedition, carried on in a breezy, cheerful vein. "All our preliminary work is done and we are going," said the letter published in the Daily Mail. "The next you'll hear from me will be, please God, 'success.' Should anything happen in the ice it will have nothing to do with the worthiness of the ship. The ship is all right."

Rowett, heartbroken, said Shackleton's one thought always was for science, regardless of himself—science and the upholding of the honor of British exploration. In accordance with the wishes of Shackleton, Commander Frank Wild, second in command, continues the voyage in command of the Quest. Wild is an explorer of wide experience in the frozen seas.

EXPEDITION TO CONTINUE
The Antarctic expedition, headed by Sir Ernest Shackleton will continue on its way toward the South Pole despite the death of its leader, Sir Ernest, according to a message received today by J. Q. Rowett, the financier who furnished money to make the dash.

The message came from Montevideo, Uruguay, whence Sir Ernest's body was taken. Sir Ernest himself had expressed the wish that the other members of the party continue if anything should happen to him.

Sir Ernest's body was received at Montevideo with full military honors and will remain there until the steamship Antarctic sails for England. The body will be brought to England for burial. It is expected to arrive here about March 1. Numerous messages of sympathy from all parts of the world are being received by Lady Shackleton in her home in East Borne.

The Shackleton expedition had had luck from the start. It left England September 17, and where off the Spanish coast the Quest was wrecked by a storm.

Professor Sargeant of Edinburgh, brother-in-law of Sir Ernest, revealed that the explorer had been warned in advance by his physicians that his health was not sound enough to stand the trip.

The Quest, a 200-ton craft, sailed from London September 17, to make a 20,000-mile cruise of small islands in the Antarctic. Although the smallest ship ever used in such an undertaking, she was equipped with complete hydrographic survey and soundings.

October 5 the Quest put in at Lisbon, after going through a storm which taxed her to the utmost. It was remarked that in her crew of 18 there was not an able-bodied seaman, all of the men being specialists and a few familiar with the oil used for fuel.

The ship reached Rio de Janeiro October 28 and died up three weeks for repairs, whence she left for South Georgia and the Antarctic.

Shackleton was 47 years old and for 20 years had been under the spell of the far southern seas. "I go exploring because I love it and because it's my job," he told friends before boarding the Quest.

Sir Ernest commanded the British Antarctic expeditions of 1907-8 and of 1914-16. With Captain Scott and Dr. Wilson, in 1905 opened the way to the south pole, he stood seven years later within 97 miles of it, with no obstacle except sheer starvation between himself and his great objective. He died, however, to find the tracks of Scott's ill-fated expedition to the pole.

Again in the Endurance, he planned to land in the Weddell sea, and traverse 1700 miles of frozen Antarctic to its other side at Ross sea. He failed once more, but he gave an epic of heroism in the history of the drift on the ice to open water, the 800-mile voyage in an open boat to South Georgia, and the rescue of the party left behind at Elephant Island.

Goethals on Way to Spokane; Is in Big Demand as Speaker

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 30.—General George W. Goethals, who left New York Sunday for Spokane to begin his survey of the Columbia basin project, is in such great demand for speeches, banquets and entertainments that Director Dan A. Scott has been informed to issue a "blanket turn-down."

More than 20 such invitations have been received by Director Scott and the Spokane Columbia basin committee from Portland, Olympia, Seattle, Tacoma, Sandpoint, representing schools, engineers, chambers of commerce, Young Men's Christian Associations and other organizations.

All invitations received by the Columbia basin committee were, at the request of Director Scott, declined with the exception of the General Goethals requested his visit to be "strictly on business."

Office Methods Are Studied at O. A. C.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Jan. 30.—Placing the electrical machines used by the school of commerce and arranging the office appliance equipment for the new commerce building will be done by students in office methods and appliance classes. The equipment is the most complete on the Pacific coast from the standpoint of machines, according to officials in the school.

Members of the classes will also work on a modern building directory to be building. Investigation of directories in Portland buildings is being made by students with a view of suggesting improvements.

Will Welcome New Agricultural Head

The Dalles, Jan. 30.—W. S. Nelson, new head of the agricultural and horticultural bureau of the local chamber of commerce, will be welcomed at the annual banquet of the chamber here on Thursday evening. Farmer Smith, veteran agricultural agent of the Union Pacific system, will be the principal speaker.

DIES AT WORK SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON, who died aboard his ship, "Quest," while en route to the South Polar seas with a party of scientists.

High Flagpole Up On School Ground

Quincy, Jan. 30.—The highest flagpole on any country school ground is the boast of the Perkins school, located two miles east of here, where a 65-foot standard floats the flag. The pole is a home-grown fir tree hewn into shape by Roy Lobley, who put it up Saturday, assisted by James Lobley, John Horr and Frank Matthes.

HIGH SCHOOL TO DEBATE

Ridgefield, Wash., Jan. 30.—Ridgefield high debaters, Erma McConnell, Elsie Tetz and Clifford Rowe, will meet the Kalamia high school debaters Friday night.

CALCUTTA CO-EDS WEAR ONE-PIECE HEADGEAR DRESS

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Jan. 30.—Rolled socks and bobbed hair are frowned upon by the girls in Calcutta, India. That country may not be up to snuff educationally, but the women don't smoke cigarettes or wear ludicrous clothes. These observations were made today by Ramendra Dutt, a 20-year-old student from India, who is here as a junior in agriculture.

"The girls over there wear a hat and dress in one piece," explained Ramendra. "It is a large piece of cloth known as a 'sari,' which they wind around their bodies and on to their heads. Only the educated women wear shoes—French heels aren't known. Occasionally you see a pair of silk stockings worn, but only by the wealthy class."

Dutt was a student at the University of Cambridge at Calcutta. He came to America to take further educational work, and studied for a while at the University of Southern California. Styles of co-eds at colleges amuse him, as well as the difference in educational system used in India and this country.

"Oregon compels physical education," says Dutt, "which I don't like, forbidding it. People in this state complain of taxes. If they had to work for $10 a year, as the laborer in my country does, and then pay part of it over to the state, they would have cause to complain."

Dutt's parents were in the export and import business at Calcutta. He has been a student, all his life, and says he intends to enter business in the United States.

Stockholders' Bond Releases Promoter

Nampa, Idaho, Jan. 30.—J. L. Nungesser, promoter and inventor, president of the Nungesser Electric Incubator Co. of Canada, who has been in the county jail for several weeks, was released Wednesday evening, when stockholders of his company went his bond for $2500. Nungesser was arrested on charges of selling stock under false pretenses and for violation of the state blue sky law. The second charge was recently dismissed in district court Judge Bryan ruling that there was no cause for action, for the reason that Nungesser had sold his personal stock as an individual and not as an agent of the company.

Heppner Highway Will Be Finished

Heppner, Jan. 30.—Arrangements have been made between the highway commission and Gilliam county for the early completion of the Gilliam county highway leading from Heppner to Heppner Junction, reports Commissioner Barratt. This means that in a short time Heppner will have completed a highway connecting with the Columbia highway at Heppner Junction.

Pacific University Offers New Courses In Spring Semester

Pacific University, Forest Grove, Jan. 30.—New courses will be offered next semester in the departments of biology, geology, religion, political science, history and sociology beginning February 7. Professor Leon Strong, head of the department of biology, announces new courses in vertebrate embryology, general biology and ornithology. A course in glacial volcanic geology will be offered by Professor O. M. Akoy. Dr. H. Albert Cook, head of the department of religion, education, will offer a new course in old testament prophets. Professor H. H. Story will give a course in physical anthropology. Professor R. C. Spencer, head of the department of history and political science, announces new courses in American history from 1850 to the present and state and local government in the United States. A course in poverty and dependence will be offered in the department of sociology under Professor H. L. Hopkins. Coach Leo Frank will continue his course in high school coaching.

While still continuing in the pulpit the reverend gentleman has gone back to high school to "freshen up" on his old studies.

He is a regular student. He can't whisper in class or violate any other classroom rules. Several of his teachers are members of his congregation.

"I am getting work in many studies which weren't given in high school in my day," said Dr. Lockwood.

His special delight is boxing in the school gym and he has "taken on" several young hunkies of the school in three round bouts. This far he has always come out with the decision.

Both the students and Dr. Lockwood's congregation are cheering with much interest the progress of the term as they can see what the "preacher" gets on his report card—for he will be graded for deportment "everything, just like a regular student."

Pastor Reverts to High School Studies And Boxes Huskies

Eureka, Cal., Jan. 30.—Every morning now Rev. C. B. Lockwood, pastor of the First Methodist church here may be seen hurrying to get to high school before the bell rings—like the rest of the students.

Both the students and Dr. Lockwood's congregation are cheering with much interest the progress of the term as they can see what the "preacher" gets on his report card—for he will be graded for deportment "everything, just like a regular student."
