

MIDNIGHT LIQUOR RAID WARRANTS IN HANDS OF DEPUTY

The Dalles Suspects to Be Tried;
Prohibition Director Linville
Seizes Much Wet Goods.

Deputy United States Marshal Frank Snow left Saturday with 17 federal court warrants for the men arrested by federal prohibition agents in Friday's midnight liquor raid at The Dalles. About 400 gallons of liquor, 150 of which is declared to be bonded Canadian whiskey, was confiscated and destroyed.

The raiders were led by Dr. Joseph A. Linville, prohibition director in the state, and seized what is believed to be the largest cache ever found in Oregon outside of Portland.

The liquor was located in a concealed sub-basement at the home of Dr. Mandrone, who is declared by Linville to be the master bootlegger of the ring.

"Hump! What do I care? Two trips to Canada will pay for all this," Mandrone is said to have laughingly declared to Linville after his arrest.

SUB-BASEMENT FOUND

The agents knocked down a concrete wall before they found the entrance to the sub-basement. When they got inside they found the entrance too small to remove the barrels of liquor, so Linville ordered the destruction in the lower room. The officers did not leave until the last drop of liquor had seeped into the dirt floor. To make their work doubly sure they scattered kerosene about the lower chamber after the raid was completed.

Linville believes the barrels he found in the secret chamber were set up in there and not taken in whole. In another room off the basement the agents found 1000 empty liquor flasks. The house is in the residence district of The Dalles.

Labels found on the bottles of bonded liquor have been turned over to the secret service and W. S. MacSwain, agent in charge, has started an investigation to determine whether any of the treasury laws have been violated.

CHINESE DET DISCOVERED

Linville is preparing a report on the raid and as soon as it reaches Washington internal revenue department will levy a tax on the house. This tax probably will be around $4000, Linville declared, or considerably more than any possible court fine. If Mandrone does not pay the tax the house will be seized by the government.

Following the raid the federal agents entered a Chinese restaurant and after considerable search found the heretofore unexplored secret passageway of Chinatown, which has been the headquarters of The Dalles police. Linville said the underground tunnel is over 100 feet long. In this they found Chinese opium dens. Eleven were arrested for alleged violation of the narcotic laws.

All the defendants were placed in the county jail. They cannot be released on bond until they appear before United States Commissioner Fraser of Portland.

Duryea Selected to Advance Activities Of State Chamber

To head the new organization and service department of the State Chamber of Commerce, M. J. Duryea, of Eugene, former active figure in commercial activities of Oregon, has been selected and will take charge of the office soon, according to announcement made by Roy T. Bishop, director in charge of the department.

At the last annual meeting of the state chamber an organization and service department was authorized so that assistance could be lent local communities to their organization problems. This service will be supplied free of cost. Duryea has been closely identified with the work of the United States Chamber of Commerce and lately has been connected with the Elmira, N. Y., Chamber of Commerce.

Bishop said that Duryea would begin active work after March 1 and that every assistance possible would be given communities in their problems of organization.

ALASKA GARDEN SPOT OF WORLD FOR MOONSHINE

Army of Men Would Be Needed to Wipe Out Traffic in Territory
Vast in Its Dimensions.

"Alaska is the garden spot of the world for moonshiners," said Jesse F. Flanders, director of prohibition enforcement agents in Oregon, Saturday, upon his return from the northern territory. Flanders left the city about a month ago, upon instructions from Washington, D. C., to install John D. Marshall, attorney at Juneau, as prohibition director of Alaska.

The thousands of miles which make up part of the Alaskan territory offer abundant opportunity for moonshiners and bootleggers to ply their trade without fear of the law, unless the government can afford to put an "army" of agents to work in the territory, Flanders believes. After viewing conditions in the Far North for a few weeks, Flanders is well satisfied with his job in Oregon, difficult though it be. He predicts that the government will have to provide its Alaskan agents with fast going motorboats to enforce the Volstead act can be enforced there.

Alaska is divided into four judicial districts, the federal judges taking care of all the cases in the territory, except a few misdemeanors, which are handled by the United States commissioners. In Alaska the commissioners have the power of a magistrate.

Flanders praised the 35 deputy United States marshals in the territory, stating they have closed up all the saloons and curbed the sale of liquor in soft drink establishments. He said these men had accomplished more than the agents in the states along this line.

Flanders found business at a standstill in Juneau, due to the closing down of a large mine near the city which employed 900 men. As soon as the contemplated paper mills are erected and opened the city expects a new boom. Ketchikan would be a dull place also, he said, were it not for the fishermen. On the return trip Flanders was three days at sea in a storm.

Portland Elkdom Is Planning for Large May Frolic Affair

Portland Elkdom has started preparations for the arrangement of a frolic week beginning May 15, to which the Fire Northmen will be expected to attend and for which a special festival commission has been appointed.

By name the jubilee will be known as the Elks' Frolic-Exposition and Festival of Peace and the committee are enthusiastically at work to prepare for the event. George L. Hutchin has been appointed director and the committee is composed of J. W. Morrow, M. R. Spalding, John B. Hittbard, W. P. Strandborg, Milton R. Klepper, Gus C. Moser, A. R. McKinley and Ben Norden.

Next week general headquarters for the festival week will be opened in the Elks' building and the committee will immediately start a program of hard work in preparation for the week of pageantry. The Auditorium has been obtained and numerous features have already been outlined, including an indoor Circus Maximus, under the direction of Walter Honeyman.

Other features which probably will be arranged are a spring fashion revue, a bazaar, Elk team drills, an industrial exhibit, dances, band concerts and a series of New Orleans Mardi Gras features.

"Hepplewhite!"

—Since its arrival and dominance from 1760 to 1830, fully a century ago—a marked contrast between this style and that of the prior vogue is easily noticed. Massive furniture for bedrooms, with each piece weighing upward of 100 pounds, is gone and, no doubt, you'll agree that this "Made-in-Oregon" Hepplewhite Period has real class and is a revived classic of tonerful refinement and quiet elegance.
