TRUCK LOAD LAW TO BE ENFORCED BY MUNICIPALITY

Not satisfied with the enforcement of the automobile truck load law by the state, the city will take steps to enforce its own ordinance, it was announced today by A. G. Johnson, assistant commissioner of public works. The council will be asked, he said, to purchase two load-ometers.

"Enforcement of the law by the state officials is spasmodic in Portland," he explained, "and, consequently, trucks are being overladen every day. The operators seem to think it beyond the power of the city to catch them, but that will remain to be seen. Our streets need protection from damage by heavily-laden trucks, and steps will be taken to prosecute every violator, both of city and state laws."

Frank S. Grant, city attorney, expressed the opinion that the city could enforce its own laws relative to load, but that the state law specifically prevents cities from enforcing their own tire specifications for various loads when in conflict with the state law.

The city ordinances prohibit the operation of a truck with a capacity greater than 10 tons, and requires a special license for all trucks having a capacity in excess of 5 tons. The state law provides that the speed of trucks with steel tires (all not be in excess of eight miles an hour; those with solid rubber tires 25 miles for a load of 6500 pounds and 12 miles for those with a 22,000-pound load, and a range of speed for trucks with pneumatic tires of 20 to 18 miles an hour under the same load conditions. Grant said that the city could provide for a lower speed limit in the congested districts.

REPAIR OF QUIMBY STREET SEWER WILL COST $1175

Cost of repairing the Quimby street sewer at its outlet, where it was damaged by piling being driven through was estimated at $1175, O. Laurgaard, city engineer, said today. The piling was driven by the Crown Mills and blocked the sewer. L. H. Hoffman, engineer of the mill will be informed of the estimated cost, Laurgaard said.

In the recent hearing on the matter, Hoffman said the mill planned to build storage bins over the ground that would probably break the sewer if repaired, and asked for an estimate of cost to reconstruct the sewer leading it 200 feet south to the Tanner creek sewer. The cost of this, Laurgaard said, would be $1800.

REQUESTS FOR INSTALLATION OF WATER METERS GAINING

Applications for installation of meters are being received by the water bureau at the rate of 20 to 25 a day, H. L. German, chief clerk of the bureau, said today. The first shipment of the 4000 meters recently purchased by the city is expected within 10 days, he said, and then work of placing the meters will be started.

More than 3000 applications, dating back six years, are now on file. A large number of these, German said, would have to be discarded, as those making the application have moved and the present occupant does not want the meter.

REROUTING OF WIRES ON FOSTER ROAD IS ADVISED

Rerouting of the high tension electric line on Foster road and placing at least two of the present pole lines under ground is recommended by the department of public works, A. G. Johnson, assistant commissioner, announced. The action was taken upon a petition from the Mount Scott Improvement club, and the recommendation will be acted upon by the council next week.

New York, Feb. 21.—(U. P.)—Mary Pickford appeared in Federal Judge Mack's court here Monday as defendant in a suit for $100,000 brought by Mrs. Cora Clara Wilkenning.

Mrs. Wilkenning alleges that sum is due her as commission for negotiating a contract between Miss Pickford and the Famous Players company in 1915.

The case has been tried twice previously. One verdict was for the defendant. The other trial resulted in a jury disagreement.

land and that his business was of such a nature that he would not disclose his address or see any visitor until his business had been completed. The report is current here that Oser's trip is for the purpose of buying a chateau near Lausanne for a wealthy American family. Oser said over the telephone that he might not return to Zurich for 10 days.

Oser is a Swiss in origin as well as citizenship, it has been ascertained. This disposes of stories that he is of the German nobility. He comes of a modest family of Basle, where his ancestors were shopkeepers.

To the good burghers of Zurich the news that Oser and Miss McCormick were to be married did not come as a surprise. The couple made no secret of their intentions, talking to more than their immediate family about their plans and upon the feasibility of the engagement on account of the disparity of their ages.

MISS McCORMICK SILENT ON QUESTION OF FIANCE'S AGE

Chicago, Feb. 21.—(I. N. S.)—How old is Max, became something of a burning question today as a controversy arose over the age of Max Oser, the Swiss riding master, who is engaged to wed Miss Mathilde McCormick, granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller.

According to Harold F. McCormick, who claims personal acquaintance with his future son-in-law, Oser is 40 years old and "still full of pep."

According to several Chicagoans who claim relationship with the Swiss horseman, Oser is at least 57 years of age.

Miss McCormick, who doubtless is the only one who really knows, continues to maintain a most successful silence.

MAX OSER TO SELL HORSES AFTER HE WEDS MATHILDE

Zurich, Switzerland, Feb. 21.—(U. P.)—Max Oser plans to sell out his livery stable and live at Lake Geneva after marriage to Mathilde McCormick, American heiress, it was learned today.

His friends disclosed the fact that last Christmas Max confidentially informed them of his betrothal to the granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller.

sible support. You see, here in San Francisco we have had occasion to study the worth of such an enterprise in its permanent effect upon local and state-wide conditions. So we speak from experience when we say that such an exposition, conservatively administered on business principles, is of almost incalculable value.

STIMULUS IS SEEN

"Its beauty and cultural appeal, however large the attributes may loom, are by no means all that an international exposition offers to the fortunate state sponsoring it. It brings as well, and quite as surely, a stimulus to prosperity that is manifest years after, and it familiarizes the nations with commercial and trade advantages of its district.

"Not one of us has ever regretted the generous financial and moral support we gave to the Panama-Pacific exposition, nor will the citizens of Oregon when they finally have financed their attraction. Already the Pacific coast is claiming that commercial and scenic distinction which is its right and heritage, yet such a project will further this progress by many years, at a single stroke. I never wished anyone 'bon voyage' with more complete confidence in the mission that took them abroad and to this wish I would add the reiterated assurance that I speak for the general sentiment of San Francisco."

MARSHAL JOFFRE INVITED

Mr. Meier bears with him on the voyage San Francisco's invitation to Marshal Joffre to be the guest of the city, when that distinguished old soldier of France visits the United States with Samuel Hill of the Pacific Northwest. With Mr. Hill, who extended to the marshal an invitation to tour America, the soldier of France is now in Japan and will be met there by the Oregon commissioner.

Marshal Joffre is to land at Seattle, at a date not yet determined upon, and to proceed southward, visiting Portland and this city en route. Here the preparations for his entertainment are being made by Mrs. A. B. Spreckels, assisted by the local chapter of the military order of the world. The opportunity to extend western hospitality to Marshal Joffre through the medium of the Oregon commissioner, was seized upon.

The Tayo Maru, sailing at noon today, is scheduled to arrive in Honolulu on February 27, where the party will spend several hours ashore. Arriving at Yokohama on March 10, the tour of Japan and the Orient will begin, terminating early in April. If the present itinerary is adhered to the European tour will be commenced at the port of Marseilles about May 1.

RAISE BONUS MONEY VIA BEER, SUGGESTED

would have to be reduced to a point which would make them "non-intoxicating" within the meaning of the constitutional amendment.

Advocates of the beer tax, however, approach the subject from the viewpoint of conformity with the eighteenth amendment. The constitution forbids the manufacture of "intoxicating beverages." The supreme court has decided that congress has the power to determine what per cent of alcohol can be in all beverages, one-half of one per cent shall be the limit, though most members of congress will admit that if the alcoholic contents were increased two, or even two and three quarters per cent, the beverage would still be non-intoxicating.

To get money enough to pay the soldier bonus, it would require a simple resolution of congress of about 50 words amending the Volstead act so as to permit 2.75 per cent beer and the revenue taxes could also be amended so as to put a tax of 20 cents per gallon on the beverage. The whole thing would be a simple procedure if the prohibition force did not have as tight a hold on members of congress as to cause the latter to hesitate. But the danger of punishment by an aroused soldier vote is not easily swept aside either.

And many of the soldiers are as resentful about the passage of a prohibition amendment to the constitution while they were absent in France as they are about any single thing which congress has done. To pay the soldiers a bonus and give them at the same time a beverage of non-intoxicating alcoholic content would admittedly be a solution devoutly to be wished for, politically speaking, if it were not for the potential power of the anti-beer forces who have in the past been strong enough to compel congress to deny beer to the sick, as well as the healthy.

Whether the anti-beer elements could win in a fight against the soldier bonus influence is quite another story, the answer to which can only be given after soldier opinion has expressed itself directly to congress.

HARDING COMES OUT FOR DELAY OF BONUS BUGABOO

Washington, Feb. 21.—(U. P.)—President Harding is "strongly in favor" of postponing soldier bonus legislation until next year, it was learned on reliable authority today.

The president communicated his view to a Republican senator who called at the White House. He did not say that he would veto a bonus bill if it was sent to him, but he indicated he might do so if protests continue to reach him.

What Harding wants to know, it is reported, is whether the opposition is to the bonus bill itself, or only against paying the bonus by the special taxes which the senate and house conference originally decided upon.

There was a demand from many house members today that the president indicate clearly whether he will veto a bonus measure if it comes to him with other than the sales tax method for providing the needed revenue.

Opponents of the sales tax in the house were claiming a victory today. Early reports, they said, indicated that the petition started out late yesterday against the sales tax was being freely signed in all state delegations.

TREASURY SECRETARY TAKES FIRM STAND AGAINST TAX

Washington, Feb. 21.—(I. N. S.)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon warned congressional money hunters today that the establishment of a sales tax to provide funds to meet the soldier bonus presents "enormous difficulties of administration" and is inadvisable at this time.

Secretary Mellon appeared before the tax division of the ways and means committee, along with Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair and experts from the treasury, and discussed at some length the features of the sales tax plan. Secretary Mellon reiterated his opposition to it.

180 Days in Jail Prescribed as Cure For Man Hiccoughs

Municipal Judge Rossman is not a doctor, but Monday afternoon he diagnosed a bad case of coughing and prescribed a remedy which was entirely effective.

Symptoms of the disorder began without warning in the courtroom when the judge proposed to hold James Quinn in jail while police investigated further his possession of some overalls.

"Hic-Hic-Cough-Cough," began Quinn eloquently. "Judge, I simply can't stand that jail any longer—hic-hic—or it will kill me. I—cough—am about dead now with this cough, and my physical—cough—condition won't allow me to remain."

"Well, how did you get all those overalls?" insisted the judge.

Quinn described a lengthy transaction with an Oakland, Cal., firm with which he said he had done considerable business.

"Well, we'll only hold you until we can verify your story through the police there," said the judge.

Quinn looked decidedly crestfallen. "I couldn't stand it that long," he said gloomily. "Sentence me now. I can't wait for you to get word from Oakland." Quinn's coughing fit was entirely forgotten by him. "Don't write to Oakland," he pleaded.

After Inspector Howell testified that the overalls were identical with some stolen here recently, and that Quinn had served four penitentiary sentences, the judge said:

"Well, we'll make it 180 days. That will cure your cough."

"Hic-hic-cough," said Quinn, reminded that he was ill.

Business Cycle as Influence on Idle To Be Investigated

(By United News)

Washington, Feb. 21. — Secretary Hoover has just launched a special committee on a six months' investigation of the business cycle as an element in unemployment.

This committee, Hoover said, was part of the program outlined by the president's unemployment conference.

At the end of six months, Hoover predicted, a report will be ready for the president and the public. The committee will be assisted by the volunteer services of several national research organizations.
