Church Wedding Simple; 300 At Reception

By Helen Hutchison
PALMS and acacia blossoms, combined with bride roses adorned the altar for the marriage of Miss Dorothy Jackson, which was solemnized Wednesday evening at Trinity chapel.
The ceremony, which took place at 8:30 o'clock, was performed by Dr. A. A. Harrison in the presence of immediate relatives and a few close friends. A reception for more than 300 guests followed at the Benson hotel, the crystal room being decorated with spring blossoms for the occasion.
The bride was gowned in ivory tulle and satin crepe, her gown fashioned on simple lines with court train and crystal bead trimmings. A betel veil of pink tulle and lace held in place at the back of the coiffure by a bandeau of orange blossoms fell to the hem of the gown. The bridal bouquet was of white spray orchids and gardenias with satin ribbons. Mrs. John H. White in a gown of orchid tinted canton crepe embellished with a cluster of blue grapes, and Mrs. Nancy Zan Scott in a rose colored gown of the same material with arrangement of silver grapes and silver wreaths as headpieces, were the bride's attendants. They carried rainbow showers of sweet peas. Mr. Edgar E. Piper was best man.
At the church ushers who seated the guests were Mr. Donald J. Stierling and Mr. Robert L. Sablin Jr. The bride was given in marriage by her grandmother, Miss Alice H. Strawbridge, who wore a gown of black satin with tulle and jet trimmings.
Following the ceremony the guests were received in the crystal room of the Benson hotel, where Mrs. Strawbridge and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Jackson, parents of the bridegroom, received with the bride party.
Mr. Jackson and his bride will spend two months in the South and East before returning to Portland to make their home.

DRESS

© No. 570-4

Flannel promises to be one of the featured fabrics for sports and street dresses, and in its present-day development, it rivals broadcloth in the fineness of its texture. It also lends itself perfectly to the type of gown illustrated here, and is used as a background for the motifs of embroidery carried out in worsted thread in a peasant design, which are placed on the shoulders. This note of color is repeated in the armo and the lines of stitching which trim the frock.

ONE of the pretty girls in "Bringing Up Father in Wall Street," an edition of the famous Journal cartoons brought to life and set to music, which opens a brief engagement at the Heilig theatre tonight.

That eccentric funmaker and laugh producer, Mr. Jiggs, hero of the famous comic strip, "Bringing Up Father," drawn by George McManus and published each day in The Journal, will appear "in person" at the Heilig theatre tonight and until Saturday night, with a special matinee Saturday.

Jiggs will be accompanied by Maggie, the rolling pin queen, the charming Kitty, the daughter, and the irrepressible Dinty Moore, supplemented by a clever chorus of young misses who are versed in the arts of singing and dancing. This season's offering is called "Bringing Up Father in Wall Street," and comes direct from the most successful engagement at the Manhattan Opera house, New York, the home of grand opera, where it entertained the patrons of that huge playhouse for many weeks. David Belasco, one of the theatrical managers, said: "There is not only wit and humor, but a great deal of human nature in 'Bringing Up Father.'" There are a number of catchy songs which will be hummed and whistled by the local playgoers long after the attraction has departed.

Nearly every American reads with enjoyment each day of the doings of Jiggs and his family as pictured in the McManus cartoons and a sincere effort has been made to portray these characters in the flesh in this interesting musical show.

Godowsky Gives Program of Piano Gems

By J. L. Wain
LEOPOLD GODOWSKY appeared in recital at the Heilig theatre Wednesday night and refreshed one's memory how beautiful legato passages can be played on the piano. In this line of pianistic art he has few real competitors.

Godowsky's playing is characterized by beauty of tone, elegance of phrasing and a performance entirely free from mannerisms, but not especially strong rhythmically. For him to pound the keyboard with sledge-hammer force, however, would be out of sympathy with himself, for there is nothing bombastic about him. When he speaks, it is in a soft, gentle voice and that characteristic is brought out when he caresses the keys of the piano. To hear him interpret Chopin is a delight and the Sonata in B minor that he chose for his big offering on this occasion was a wonderful presentation. More tempestuous temperament might have added to the effectiveness of Brahms' Schapody with which Godowsky opened his program. Amazing agility of the chubby fingers was displayed in many of the numbers, especially the closing group that included Debussy's "Reflections in the Water," MacDowell's "March Wind" and Mozakowski's "In Autumn."

As an arranger of classics for the piano Godowsky has gained prominence and a group from his "Renaissance" was received with enthusiastic applause. Five numbers from his "Trikontameron" proved interesting. He was called on for several extra numbers.

The concert was under the management of W. T. Fangle.

Fatima, sultana of Afghanistan, will sail for Bombay today without her big 44.15 carat diamond, the Daryasnoor, or in plain English, "Light of the Sea." The stone will remain here for several reasons, one being that it is held in pledge for debt. Another, and the most important, is to satisfy a government claim for duty.
