The curtain rises on evening performances at 8 o'clock, and at 2 o'clock for Saturday matinee.

Box office open until 10 o'clock tonight at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s ticket window, Sixth and Morrison streets. Tomorrow and balance of week from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. at Sherman-Clay's, and after 6 at The Auditorium.

Children under 6 years will not be admitted to performances, and children over 6 years must have tickets.

Pangle, who is managing the local engagement, but he urges all persons who have made up their minds to attend to not delay selecting seats. The ticket line, which remained nearly a half block in length at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s all day yesterday and until 10 o'clock last night, started in this morning with a new line. The ticket sale will continue open until 10 o'clock tonight.

Human Beings Juggled in Mid Air

By C. L. S.

WHY go to a circus to see jugglers of human beings? The Four Bards at the Pantages theatre this week are marvels of agility and strength. Their aerial tumbling and diving would hold the center stage of any three ring circus. They work with no trappings or nets and perform with precision and poise that command instant admiration. The act holds the honor place on a bill that is featured by high class offerings.

Jim and Irene Marlyn, in a kaleidoscopic review, present a violin and dance act that is a fitting accompaniment for the entry of spring. Miss Marlyn wields the bow with a dexterous hand, coaxing melodious strains from the king of instruments. Like most women violinists who appear in vaudeville, she trips lightly back and forth before the footlights.

An interesting and lively conglomeration of jokes, songs and dancing featuring a woman tumbler is an honor winner for Elizabeth Nelson and the Barry boys, one of whom is a blackface artist of humorous slant. The feminine acrobatic stunts are especially good, and what is more, this fair exponent of the art usually featured by the stefner sex is an exceptionally well-moulded and graceful performer.

The really high class vocal part of the bill is taken by David Reese, a tenor of pleasing and refined stage bearing and voice of quality and extraordinary power. He received generous applause for the rendition of three or four selections.

"Good Night, Nurse," a playlet, featuring Marta Golden and Ursula March, is brimfull of contagious humor. The nurse and the maid are at sword points on the care of the infant, and hubby, who is not strong on the nursery business, gets fussed up by his ungainliness in butting in on infantile affairs.

The girl with the ropes opens the vaudeville. Hazel Moran twirls the hemp with the skill of a cowboy and keeps up a witty chatter between loops.

Admirers of pugilistic things get a variety of kicks out of the boxing bout in round three of "The Leather Pushers." The movie scenes are real and claret flows freely in one of the mixups.

Work For Girls Discussed At Luncheon

By Vella Winner

THE WOMEN OF ROTARY held their monthly luncheon and business meeting Monday in the Tyrolean room of the Hotel Benson, with 50 members in attendance. Mrs. Elbert C. Peets presided and Mrs. Charles Wolfgang was chairman for the day.

Mrs. Edith Miles, superintendent of the home for girls conducted by the state board of health and Oregon Social Hygiene association, told of the excellent work of that institution in preventive work and in safeguarding girls who would otherwise be homeless and friendless. Girls without funds are cared for two weeks without charge while they seek employment. The Women of Rotary were especially interested in this institution, inasmuch as they furnished a room in the home.

Mrs. Lota Stone gave two beautiful whistling solos and Miss Lola Kiernan sang, with Miss Woodcock at the piano. J. H. Joyce announced the forthcoming Rotary conference at Vancouver and urged the women to "take their husbands and go."

The travelers' aid committee will meet at 11 a. m. at the Y. W. C. A. Thursday. The transportation agreement will be discussed.

A new feature of the work is the movement toward inter-city cooperation and to this end club women in the various towns and cities of the state are being asked to cooperate in the matter of meeting and assisting young girls going to distant towns to live and in some cases to make investigation in the home town of those coming to the city.

One case of recent occurrence was that of a young woman from a distant city. After a test was made at the city health department it was found that her mentality only registered that of a child of 10, though she is 30 years of age. At present she is being cared for at an institution in the city.

A team from the women's evening class of Peninsula park and a team from the Y. W. C. A. played a game of basketball Friday night at the clubhouse, the Peninsula women winning by a score of 29 to 6. A. players were: Mesdames McKinley, Taylor, Grier, Green, Myers, McKean. Annie and Nance Peterson substituted for Mrs. Gilliham and Mrs. Barton. Misses Hughes and Treagea substituted for Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Myers. Mrs. Gillham and Annie Peterson were high point winners for Peninsula, each scoring 10 points.

Mrs. Otto Osborn, Mrs. Irwin Turner, Mrs. W. S. Roberts, Miss Hulbert, Mrs. Walter Mitchell and Mrs. Arthur Ireland participated in an amusing dramatic sketch.

"His Nibs" Has Big Comedy Values

"HIS NIBS," playing this week at the People's theatre, is a very clever comedy, depicting in farcical manner the small town life characteristic of the boyhood of most men of today, except, perhaps, that the motion picture is a new element. The feature of the picture is the multiplicity of roles played by Charles (Chic) Sales, who appears in no less than seven character parts.

Sales, if we may sum into one sentence the weight of opinion about "His Nibs," is the whole show. This famous vaudeville performer, who has visited Portland on the variety stage, reveals in "His Nibs" a capacity for charcter acting that is beyond the imagination of the average artist. His display of histronic ability in the film is just as unusual as it was in vaudeville.

The same result might be achieved in watching the same actor in seven different pictures, it has been suggested, but that is barely possible, for few actors have the versatility required to portray at once an old man and again a snickering spinster, rotating these with impersonations of the town dandy and the bashful neighborhood kid. His work at straight comedy is equally as keen as his presentation of the pathetic figure of the boy.

Sale shows that he has grasped the comedy idea of rural characters. The result is funny to the n-th degree. The photography for the picture, which marks Sale's debut in the films, is excellent and the settings are reminiscent of a dozen villages near at hand. Sale has incorporated into an intersting story the act that has served him so long and so well in vaudeville, but he has materially enhanced it and the story as a whole is one that commands a measure of interest totally aside from the interest in the novelty of the seven different characterizations of one actor.

A second comedy, featuring Brownie and Ted, two well-trained dogs, rounds out the program. Both dogs perform far better than some of the so-called motion picture comedians of the genus homo. The People's orchestra, under Director John Britz, plays throughout the showing.

Westland Prepares For "Foolish Wives"

Ben Westland, publicity director of the Universal Film company, arrived in Portland, Monday, to create interest in his current attraction, "Foolish Wives," which comes to the People's theatre Saturday for a limited engagement. "Foolish Wives" is described as the most costly motion picture ever produced. It stars Erich von Stroheim, the most hated man on the screen, who likewise wrote the story and directed the picture.

DRESS

The Slashed Over-Dress Is Evolved From the Peasant Blouse.

Black still remains in the mode, but it seems to have become the foundation on which color builds. Here it makes the underslip of a tea-frock of beige crepe. Long beige silk tassels hang loose at the sides of the skirt and fall below the hem, and shorter ones perform the same service for the sleeves. Embroidery in many color combinations trims this frock and serves the double purpose of weighting the loose sleeves and skirt panels. The tight inner sleeve and the loose outer one are exceedingly smart.

FASHION'S REALM

Washington, March 21.—It is no longer the exclusive privilege of the telephone to hide behind the skirts of a pink and white china doll. One's powder puff, hairpins, nail file, handkerchief, small change, bills, keys—in fact, all the myriad things that lurk in a woman's bag—may hide behind wide and brilliant doll skirts now. A doll's head forms the top of the newest handbag, and her puffy cretonne or silk gown cleverly does the rest.

Lakewood, N. J., March 21.—A small black pump seen here and meant for street wear has elastic inserts on the side and four narrow leather straps. The straps were without buttons, the elastic stretching when the shoe was slipped on and tightening automatically afterward to hold the shoe in place. The heel was moderately low and the whole effect chic as well as comfortable.

Chicago, March 21.—Pockets are the up-to-date adjuncts for the flowing sleeves of evening gowns, though from the length and width of present sleeves a whole carpet-bag could be concealed in one of them. Chiffon and georgette dance frocks have sleeves which are drapery, train and shoulder cape all in one. They require a skillful gathering up if one is to dance without walking on one's own cuff, but the longer they come the more graceful they are. The pockets are mere folds of georgette, large enough to hold a wisp of kerchief or powder puff.

New York, March 21.—A Fifth avenue shop is featuring extreme simplicity of material and linen in underthings for young girls. They include the chemise of batiste without gathering or ruffled edge, however, with real val lace. A hand-made batiste nightgown is permitted a V neck flanked by little groups of tucks, and a batiste envelope chemise has the neck edges with real val and the hem edged with a narrow net ruffle. Even for the young girl, the breakfast coat is a splendor of ruffled crepe meteor, or taffeta, in ciel, rose, peach, coral or pale orchid, with a two-tone ribbon girdle.

Mrs. Andre E. Gagnon of Marshfield is expected to arrive in the city tomorrow and will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Francis A. Sherman in Alameda Park.

Columbia Puts On Two Fine Features

By E. C. B.

IT'S PURELY a matter of guesswork to determine whether the crowds flocking into the Columbia theatre this week are drawn by the alluring announcements of the presentation of Fannie Hurst's "Back Pay," or by the more modest exploitation of Robert Bruce's "Women Must Weep," an extraordinary "scenic" photographed on the Oregon coast line near Newport last summer.

"Women Must Weep," would arouse keenst interest had it been offered as a photographic tour of some unknown foreign shore, but, instead, it is an astounding revelation of picturesque beauty in our very dooryard and, therefore, interest must be more than keen. And the little story that is woven in with magnificent glimpses of the great ocean, the enchanting quality of shoreline vistas, is presented by folk we know—Mayo Methot of the Baker Stock company; Mae Norton, former Portland newspaper woman, and Broderick O'Farrell, former Baker player.

The picture is another proof, despite a plethora of imported scenics, that Oregon holds a wealth of natural scenic charm that cannot be bettered anywhere. From the standpoints of artistry and local interest, if for no other reasons, "Women Must Weep," is very much worth while.

The feature of the current program at the Columbia is "Back Pay" from a Fannie Hurst story. Its topic borders on the risque, perhaps, but it is kept rigorously clean—there is no element of vulgarity and interest is maintained by

Shoes That Fit the Springtime

When spring comes, and leaves bud, and the grass grows green, and the air turns soft and warm and fragrant, aren't you going to feel a lot younger? Of course you are. Winter is old age. Spring is youth.

Prepare for it now. Start now to feel young. Buy flexible, comfortable shoes. Nothing in your wardrobe can hurt you more than the wrong kind of shoes.

For appearance, you will like Cantilever Shoes, with their graceful, sensible lines, their modish low and medium heels, their fine materials and fine workmanship.

SO COMFORTABLE!

For comfort, and the avoidance of foot troubles which so many women needlessly experience, Cantilever Shoes are in a class of their own, famous and praised the country over. They are made with flexible arches—not the rigid shanks you get in ordinary shoes. This flexibility of the Cantilever Shoe, permitting free circulation and strengthening action of the foot muscles, enhances the grace and youth of your walk.

Cantilever Shoes keep your feet from getting tired, help you enjoy the out-of-doors, improve your health. You will enjoy wearing Cantilevers; for their trim appearance as well as their comfort.

a clever combination of story, setting and portrayal. Hester Bevins, a girl with a "crepe de chine soul," is impersonated admirably by Seena Owen, and Matt Moore is Jerry Newcombe, the home town lad. J. Barney Sherry has an important role as Charles Wheeler, millionaire.

Hester, leaning toward a life of luxury, finally allows herself to collapse into its lap, a pitfall from which a stirring climax brings her back to respectability. The exteriors in this picture are far and away above the average of motion picture conception.

An added feature of much value is Screenland News, which offers numerous interesting, well photographed and brilliantly titled bits of local news.
