

OLCOTT AND HOFF FORMALLY ENTER RACE FOR OFFICES

Salem, April 12.—Governor Ben W. Olcott today filed with Secretary of State Koser his formal declaration as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. In his platform, accompanying his declaration, he declares that "my administration will continue to be founded on principles of good business, with constant reduction of expense coincident with return of pre-war conditions, but with due regard for the welfare of the state, her citizens and her institutions. I stand for an absolutely impartial government for all the people."

His Treasurer O. P. Hoff is also among the formal entrants into the primary race today. In his platform, Hoff promises to "give the best that is in me to the running of the office and discharging my duties as a member of the several boards. I was a member of the senate of office in my platform, my conscience my only boss."

CAMPBELL OUT AGAIN Thomas K. Campbell of Portland is out for the Republican nomination for public service commissioner as a candidate from the state at large. In his platform Campbell promises to "administer the public utility laws, which are now broad enough to fully protect the public, impartially and impartially, and will use my best endeavors to bring the commission back again to its old moorings and make it the servant of the people. It was during the early period of its existence that I was a member thereof. I pledge myself to protect the public in its right to enjoy reasonable rates and adequate service and my past record stands as a guarantee for the complete fulfillment of this promise."

RYANS SEEKS JUDGESHIP Other candidates filing their declarations today were: Walter H. Evans, Portland, Republican, for circuit judge, department No. 8, Multnomah county. RELATED CANDIDATES FILE THEIR DECLARATIONS TODAY Today being the last on which filings may be made for primary nomination, related candidates are coming in with their platforms and slogans before the deadline is drawn. Among them is S. K. Kubli, who is seeking renomination on the Republican ticket as one of Multnomah county's representatives in the lower house of the legislature. He requests that the following words are to be printed after his name on the ballot: "Lower taxes; home industry; business administration; just treatment to all." Another seeker for the Republican nomination for representative from Multnomah county is Stanley Myers, who has filed for the Republican nomination for district attorney of Multnomah county, a position he is now filling through appointment of the governor. J. N. Hart has filed his candidacy for the Republican nomination for circuit judge, department No. 8.

FILES STATEMENT IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

Maurice E. Crumpacker His declaration to become a candidate for congress in the third district at the coming Republican primary election was filed today with the secretary of state by Maurice E. Crumpacker. In brief his platform follows: "The development of Oregon's great wealth is of national significance. I favor federal aid and assistance in the promotion of our ports, rivers and harbors, reclamation of arid and cut-over lands, roads and highways, water power, fish and game and forest. Relief to ex-service men and women; their attempt to rehabilitate themselves along physical and industrial lines is a moral duty which our country owes to them. I favor adjusted compensation for such persons. I will represent all of the people of my district and will endeavor to exercise sane and conservative judgment upon national questions." The slogan which will appear after his name on the ballot is: "Relief for service men; federal aided ports, highways, arid lands, parks, waterpower."

CLATSOP PREACHER JOINS CONTEST FOR HOUSE SEAT Astoria, April 12.—The first minister to seek a legislative office from Clatsop county Wednesday declared his intention of running for the Republican nomination for state representative at the May primaries. He is Rev. J. T. Jeffery, Methodist pastor at Seaside. "Fewer laws and more law enforcement" is his slogan. His entry makes the race a three-cornered one at present, with two positions to be filled. E. N. Hurd, editor of the Seaside Signal and incumbent, and E. H. Fliegel, editor of the Warrenton News, have both declared their candidacies. Millard P. Hardesty of Seaside, and Garnet L. Green and James W. Mott, Astoria attorneys, are known to be considering seeking the legislative nomination.

Salaries Reduced by Boise School Board Boise, Idaho, April 12.—Salary cuts were made by the Boise independent school district board Tuesday night affecting the city superintendent, the high school principal and three supervisors. Teachers' salaries remain the same except that the minimum for new teachers is lowered. The greatest cut is made in the salary of P. J. Simmers, superintendent, who is now receiving instead of $8000, which he is now receiving.

HER OWN WAY By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN de WATER

CHAPTER 15 Helen Gorman went softly up to her room. She did not wish Mrs. Ovington to know that she was at home yet. She closed her door noiselessly, then turned the key. She must be alone when she read what Elizabeth had to tell her. She opened the envelope and saw that it contained a sealed telegram. With it was a half-sheet of paper on which Elizabeth had written: "Dear Nell—This telegram arrived this morning. It would be well for you to notify me as to your present address. Had this come twenty-four hours later you would not have received it. I am leaving my apartment early tomorrow morning. I am to be married on Tuesday and sail for Europe on that day—much earlier than planned. I am sorry you could not see Tom and let him tell you of my arrangements. Anyway, I shall hope to see you in my home when I return in the Fall. Until then, try to be less conscious of—Your friend, BETTY."

Sailing for Europe! She and Tom were to be married as soon as this! The room seemed to reel and rock before Helen's eyes. She dropped into a chair and buried her face in her hands. Married! It could not be true! And only yesterday Tom had urged her to go for a drive with him this afternoon. She had refused, even though he had urged her to do so. Now she knew why he had wanted her to tell her the news. Elizabeth, knowing of Helen's disapproval of marriages for money, had delegated Tom to notify her friend of their coming wedding.

Stepsons Beat Him, Charge of Husband Roseburg, April 12.—Mrs. Mary Ann Hadley and three sons, George, Elmer and Merton Butel, were arrested here Wednesday on a warrant secured by William Hadley, husband of the woman and stepfather of the three boys, charging them with assault and battery. He alleged that his wife and her three sons assaulted him with chairs and stove wood, and when he fled to the home of a neighbor they followed him there for the purpose of injuring him. The neighbor ended matters by knocking down the oldest son of Mrs. Hadley, who was the aggressor, according to the complaint. The Hadleys live near Melrose. The woman and boys allege that Hadley attacked one of the boys without just cause.

Stepsons Beat Him, Charge of Husband (Continued) Helen had insisted to him once that Betty cared for Willard. Of course, Tom did not believe her statement. Even then he had Elizabeth's promise to marry him. With the excited imagination of jealousy, Helen Gorman jumped to the conclusion that the "case" that Elizabeth Mayo had been nursing lately was one of Tom's patents. The nurse had spoken of going abroad next summer with the little girl who had died early in the winter. But she had never intimated that either the child or the woman was Dr. Andrews' patient. So Betty had lied when she spoke of traveling with the invalid. She had tried to hide the truth from everybody while she and Helen had been so busy. As Moly Dater had said, "oodles of money"—were planning to steal off in this underhanded way. This is what Tom had wanted to tell Helen. His voice had been as happy as if poor Luther Willard had not gone away crushed and disappointed. Tom had no heart—except, perhaps, what he had given to Betty. And she had no heart. They were a well-matched pair! Suddenly Tom Andrews' face was flushed upon the retina of Helen Gorman's memory—the eyes that had looked into hers with an expression that had made her heart beat madly. For a wild instant she felt that she must see him; that this dreadful thing could not be happening to her—that the

BURGESS' BEDTIME STORIES (By Therese W. Burgess) Mrs. BLUEBIRD had finally made up her mind. She had chosen one of those new houses in the Old Orchard. "But," Elizabeth had been so anxious to say about it. But if Mrs. Bluebird was satisfied Winsome was also satisfied. Once he had ventured to say, "Don't you think, my dear, that it would be just as well to look somewhere else before we decide?" "No, I don't," replied Mrs. Bluebird sharply. "We might look all summer, but this would be a better home than this will be when we have built a nest in it. Now get busy right away. What are you sitting around waiting for? Go hunt for some nice soft, dead grass. I think we can raise two families in this house this year, and perhaps three. Dear me, dear me, why don't you hunt for that grass instead of sitting around?" "All right, my dear," replied Winsome. "All right, my dear, I'm going." He did start, but apparently he forgot what he had started for. Instead of hunting for soft, dead grass he flew over to a fence post and whistled. But the joy of spring was in Winsome's heart and he couldn't work long at a time. He had just got to tell all the Old Orchard how glad he was. He pretended that he was telling Mrs. Bluebird, and perhaps he was. Mrs. Winsome wasted no time. Like the good housekeeper she is, she meant to have that house in order as soon as possible, and so she worked and worked while Winsome whistled. Mrs. Winsome was more and more pleased with that house. When she had time to talk at all she could talk of nothing else. "We are going to have the strongest, healthiest children we have ever had," she declared to Winsome. "They just cannot help but be healthy in a house like this. I declare, I don't see how we ever got along in that old house. I really don't. I wish Jenny when would hurry up and arrive. I just ache to hear what she'll say when she sees these new houses, especially as Tommy Tim the Chickadee has had first pick of them. Now do stop whistling and bring some more grass." With this Mrs. Bluebird went to look for some more herself. (Copyright, 1922, by T. W. Burgess) The next story: "The Arrival of Jenny Wren."
