the surface. The allegation brought forth in some quarters that the reading of the message was so staged as to seem a hoost for the 1924 candidacy of former Governor Cox has reawakened the fires of hitterness existing in factions of the Democratic party. It is alleged by friends of Cox that friends of William McAdeo started the report, attributed "members of the former president's nily;" that Wilson had not sent the mage to the Jackson day banquet. It was "feeling" between the McAdoo and Cox wings of the Democratic party which contributed to the dimensions of Influential friends of McAdoo were reluctant to advance funds for the cam-paign and there still remains a healthy deficit in the Democratic treasury. In recent weeks Chairman Hull of the

There followed manifestations of teep concern in the McAdoo camp. There appeared reports that "from the Wilson household" had come word that the Tumuity communication was not authorized.

The incident has revived reports that Wilson had broken or might break with his former secretary. Tumulty. The report caused real concern to intimate friends of Wilson, recalling the previous break with George Harvey, the late Colouel Watterson and Colonel House and others, who at one time were political pivisers as well as intimate friends of Wilson. Adding Tumpity to these senadvisers as well as intimate friends of Wilson. Adding Turnulty to these sentional rifts of friendship, coupled with the break with former Secretary of War Garrison and former Secretaries of State Bryan and Lansing, would in the opinion of Wilson's friends, be unfortunate. It will be recalled that Turnulty wrote his book on Wilson without the knowledge or consent of the former president. Turnulty frankly revealed the fact at the outset of his opening chapter. It had

Washington, April 13.—That factional biliteriness within the Democratic party has not subsided is seen by political leaders here in the hubbub stirred up by the reading a few words of 'quotes from President Wilson at the Jackson fay dinner in New York last Saturday right.
