

'OUTLAW' TREATY TREATENS BREAK AT GENOA PARLEY

RECIPROCALITY PROVIDED The new pact is based on a complete recognition of the principle of reciprocity, the Russian delegates said, and makes possible the highest degree of economic cooperation between the two nations.

SECRET RUSS-GERMAN PACT THROWS PARLEY OFF TRACK By Paul Edgar Hoover. (Special Cable to The Journal and Chicago Daily News.)

Genoa, April 18.—It is an open question this morning whether the Genoa conference will break up or continue. The Russians and Germans have suddenly and secretly combined in an offensive against the spirit of the conference.

MAY RECALL DELEGATION An alliance between Russia and Germany is what both Britain and France have most feared and its effect has been to bring France and Britain closer together than ever.

BLOCK CONFERENCE The Germans in particular have shown themselves moderate and conciliatory since arriving here and were meeting along well, even with the French.

FRANCE SUPPORTS ENVOY IN QUITTING GENOA CONFERENCE Paris, April 18.—(U. P.)—Russia and Germany signing a treaty at Rapallo have rendered the Genoa economic conference impossible.

to consider common action. To make matters worse the Russians have given the newspaper correspondents a communique addressed to the Red army and navy, explaining the Russian stand at Genoa for "disarmament and peace," attacking the "capitalistic bourgeoisie governments," particularly France, and saying that they expect the people of all countries to bring pressure upon the capitalist rulers to make them cease opposing disarmament and peace.

It is necessary to make a distinction between the Russian case and the German case. The Russians have refused to accept the Cannes resolution. It is believed that the allies must now insist upon a definite answer without more delay and in case of refusal threaten to rule them out of the conference.

OPINIONS DIFFER Germany had implicitly accepted the resolutions, the fundamental conception of which was that if Russia also accepted the general agreement could be reached then Russia might be granted de jure recognition.

Some of the delegates now contend that Germany had implicitly accepted an agreement before a general agreement was concluded has broken the Cannes condition. It may be remarked in passing that if, as seems likely, the Russo-German treaty is a political as well as an economic agreement, the whole European political situation must undergo profound changes.

Regarding the German motive, opinions differ. Some say that the Germans have acted stupidly while others maintain that they have made an unexpected display of strength. In any case the negotiations, negotiations which had been going on precipitately in a sense not unfavorable to Germany will undoubtedly be now greatly complicated.

RUSSIANS AND GERMANS ON JOB WHILE OTHERS TALKED (Special Cable to The Journal and Chicago Daily News.) London, April 18.—While there were sharp outcries in the British newspapers against the Russo-German agreement and dispassionate observers appear to be inclined to regard it on its face as reasonable.

agreement. Both Germans and Russians are fighting for their lives. Neither nation is pledged to frame its foreign policy to accord with the views of the allies. Instead of a betrayal, the Russo-German treaty is a move toward Genoa and restored international confidence. It probably is destined to prove the most important result of the Genoa gathering.
