semingly, it was a long time in which reestablish a concord so manifestly intial to the nation's greater achievents, but the understanding of the mifficent Lee was not universal outboat the South, the magnanimity Grant was not manifest throughout North. Wounds had to be healed and tisan politics temporarily profited re in irritation than in healing. But war with Snain consecrated North war with Spain consecrated North 1 South to a common cause, and the rifice and nationwide service in the wid war revealed the common Amercan soul. Grant, the great nationalist, who appraised union and nationalist, above all the frightful cost and suffering, would rejoice to acciaim the re-

DIFFER ON FUNDAMENTALS I do not mean to say that everywhere in our land we are all in complete ac-cord about fundamentals of government or the basic principles upon which so-ciety is founded. But the sectionalism f Grant's and Lee's time has been ffaced and the geographical divisions which hindered the formation of the folion and later threatened its disruption have given way to far less menac-ing division which have challenged all civilisation and which make the ferment ing division which have challenged all civilisation and which make the ferment out of which all progress comes. We see today incontestably one people, with a common purpose, universal pride, nationwide confidence and one flag. The contentions which beset us are not ours alone; they were the irritants to civilisation throughout the world. They are not to be ignored, but they have never halted the human procession and will not hinder the progress of this firmly founded republic. Grant was himself the supreme example of American opportunity. Standing before his humble hithplace, amid the surroundings of his obscure boyhood life, one doubts if three quarters of a century ago anyone should have sought here for the military chieftain of a century who have not a few, even today, who think small town vision to be pilitfully circumscaribed. And yet this little Clermont county furnished in Ulysses Grant and Henry C. Corbin two of the 13 lieutenant generals who have been commissioned in our history. ed in our history.

GRANT WOULD HELP TODAY

I wonder, sometimes, if the magna-aiminity of Grant, the dogged, persist-ent, unalterable Grant in warfare—the unconditional surrender Grant — would not be helpful in the world today. The great world struggles, which might rea-sonably designate the Civil war of west-ern civilisation, and in which we so creditably and heipfully participated, left peoples and nations prostrate, hardly knowing which way to turn for restoration.

I gained help but believe that something of the spirit with which Grant welcomed victory, something of his eagainess to return to peaceful ways would have speeded the restoration and happiness, without which there can be no abiding peace. He perpetuated no resentments of war. Ferhaps he felt his own wounds which came of calumny, recalled how he was humiliated through misunderstanding and menaced by jealness and hampered by politics. But he clung to his vision of Union restored and believed the shortest route to peace to be the surest way of lasting triumph.

DISLIKED BY EXISTING ORDER

It is not to be said of Grant that he It is not to be said of Grant that he solight to preserve a political or social order or even a government which had especially favored him. He was too little favored by the existing order. Nor can it be said that he sought personal or political popularity. These things were apart from his early life. It is conceivable apart from his early life. It is conceivable that roen are prejudiced in their attitude toward great problems by their ewn experiences—more by their disappointments than their successes. Grant's own experience in life might have led a less deliberate character to welcome an upheaval or disunion or any reversal to the government. But this silent man did not appraise his country by the scale of his own misfortunes.

He had seen much of the republic. In boyhood he drove often to Cincinnati and saw the developing city, much as he maw St. Louis later on, in his early married life. Between these two periods of observation he had graduated from West Point, he had served creditably in the Mexican war, and was stationed as a milliary officer on the Pacific coast.

BAW CITIES GROW

W CITIES GROW

He saw the westward course of the irr of erhpire. He saw two typical nerkan cities grow under the impulse immigration and an expanding reblic. He saw the foreigner come to eathe deeply in the aimosphere of marican freedom and stand erect amid inspirations of American citisenship. It was without the same importations of American citisenship. It was without the same importance of youth and freedom and unlity, garbed in essentially the same importance of youth and freedom and unlity, garbed in essentially the same importance on the inspiration of resource.
